Local Man Hurt In Mishap

A Sikeston man was injured in a two-vehicle accident at highway 61 and Matthews junction at 2:16 p.m. yesterday.

William Allan McCann, 27, of Sikeston, was taken to Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston suffering from facial cuts, and a possible concussion.

Police said that McCann, who was northbound on highway 61 in a 1964 Chevrolet Van Truck, struck a 1969 Chevrolet Van Truck driven by Paul Thomas Crews, 23, of Wickliff, Ky. Police said that Crews, who was eastbound, did not see the McCann vehicle and attempted to cross highway 61. His vehicle was struck in the side and overturned in a ditch. He was not injured.

Armed Robbery Charge Filed

CHARLESTON — A felony charge of armed robbery was filed today against Chester Gary, 21, of Charleston following his arrest Tuesday in circuit court where he was appearing on a charge of striking a police officer in performance of duty.

According to deputy sheriff Everett Holley, Gary had been sought since Friday night when Joe Nathan Craig reported to authorities he was robbed at knife point of a $1.25, a cigarette lighter and a pocket knife.

Gary was sentenced Tuesday to 30 days in the county jail by circuit judge Marshall Craig on a reduced charge of common assault.

Eddie Lee Butler, 22, Charleston was arrested Saturday night on the armed robbery charge. Both Butler and Gary are to appear for arraignment Thursday in magistrate court. Bond has been set at $10,000 each.

I-55 To Be Completed In 1973

Gary Chullino, engineer with the highway department, spoke to the Kiwanis club last night at the Ramada Inn about the upcoming projects of the highway department.

"Storm sewer work on Main street is about 70 per cent complete and by spring we should be ready for the widening," Chullino said.

Main street is being widened from highway 61 north to the intersection of I-55 and highway 60 south. "The work should be completed by the end of the year," Chullino reported.

"Twenty nine miles of interstate 55 near Perryville should be completed by August or September. Perryville isplanning on a big celebration July 4 by inviting Nixon and other dignitaries to a ribbon cutting ceremony," Chillino told the club.

The final section of the I-55 project will start in two weeks. "With two good construction seasons I-55 should be completed in 1973" Chullinosaid.

The bridge over the Mississippi River at Cairo connecting I-57 and I-55 is four to five years away from completion," Chullino said.

Motions To Vacate Denied

NEW MADRID — Judge William L. Ragland in circuit court Friday overruled motions to vacate sentence filed by Floyd McCain and Therman Watson.

The men were returned to state prison at Jefferson City to continue serving their sentences.

Watson is serving four yrars for burglary and larceny in the theft Nov. 1, 1970 of shotguns and rifles form J. C. Penney Store in Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center in Sikeston.

McCain is serving four years for burglary and larceny in the theft of $23 and a watch from Bud Montgomery's junk yard in Gideon, after his probation was revoked in July, 1971.

Judge William H. Billings, serving as special judge, Friday granted Sue A. Gardner a divorce from Clarence Dempsey Gardner and approved a property settlement.

Liberalized State Retirement

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill liberalizing the retirement system for both state employes and legislators reached the Missouri Senate today with the approval of its Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Maurice Schechter, DCreve Coeur, the sponsor, said it would give state workers more take home pay than if they got a 5 per cent salary increase.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes warned the legislators in his opening message the state could not afford both, and urged the lawmakers to choose one or the other.

Under the Schechter plan, developed by a joint House-Senate committee after a series of hearings, state workers would not have to contribute 4 per cent of their salaries toward their pensions, as they do now.

But the contribution of legislators would go up from 4 to 5 per cent.

The bill also includes provisions for up to $5,000 life insurance plus health and accident insurance, all at state cost.

The state cost for 10 months is estimated at $6.6 million and for the first full year at $8 million.

Arthur Hamm, president of Council 72 of the State, County and Municipal Employes Union, AFL-CIO, said his 7,000 members are overwhelmingly in favor of the bill and consider it fair.

A previous effort to raise legislative pensions disproportionately as compared with state employes was defeated in an initiative election.

Poison Plot Couldn't Work

CHICAGO (AP) -- An alleged plot to poison city water supplies was a "harebrained scheme" that could not have worked, says James J. Jardine, Chicago water and sewage commissioner.

Two men, both city college students, were charged Tuesday with conspiracy to commit murder by introducing typhoid germs into the Chicago's supply of drinking water.

Jardine said any attempt to poison the water supply was bound to fail. Chlorine added continuously to the one billion gallons of water pumped daily to Chicago would have destroyed the typhoid bacteria, he said. Security police also guard the two water filtration plants round the clock.

Held in Cook County jail today on $250,000 bond each were Steve Pera, 18, a former hospital worker from Evanston, Ill., and Allan Schwander, 19, of Chicago.

Chicago police arrested the men at midnight Monday in Schwnader's North Side apartment.

Ted Elliott, Jess Lacefield and Glenda Buchannan
Jaycee DSA Honorees

TED ELLIOTT received the Jaycees highest award last night when he was named the recipient of the Distinguished Service Award.

Ted Elliott was the recipient of the Distinguished Service Award at the Annual Jaycee DSA and Boss of the Year Banquet held last night at the country club.

The Distinguished Service Award is the highest award given by the Jaycees and is given to a man between the ages of 21 and 35 for the most meritorius service to his family, community and country.

Also honored was Jess Lacefield, manager of the J. C. Penney Co., as the Boss of the Year.

This award is given to the Jaycee Boss who contributes the most toward helping the Jaycee projects and is most co-operative with his employees by allowing them to work on the Jaycee projects also.

The Outstanding Young Educator Award went to Glenda Buchannan, a sixth grade teacher at Middle School.

Jim Hart, quarterback for the St. Louis Football Cardinals, was the guest speaker. Hart graduated from SIU in 1967 and has been playing for the Cardinals for six years.

"A lot goes on on the field that is not seen on television," Hart said. "Referees help keep the quarterback alive. They allow no unnecessary roughness, sometimes."

Talking about the past seasons games Hart said, "Things can't get any worse. We will not fumble or drop the ball as much in the next 10 years as we have in the past year."

"The whole team was set back by personal tragedies such as illness and death. Our thoughts couldn't be directed soley to football."

One of Harts pet peeves is for someone to say he throws a hard ball. "I do not throw a hard ball and when someone says I do I go and ask my receivers for reassurance."

When asked whether he had rather throw the ball when the receivers were covered man to man or in a zone defense Hart said, "I'd rather throw man to man because then you just have one man to worry about."

"The receivers are scared to go inside," Hart said, "and when they're not catching the ball you don't have the confidence to throw it."

Hart said in the last few weeks he had heard rumors that he had been traded all over the country.

"I would not like to be traded. I love the team and the coaching staff. I don't want to leave but am prepared to go if that's the case," he said.

Phantom Downs MIG 21

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Navy Phantom jet shot down a fast MIG21 in a blazing air duel of jet fighters today deep inside North Vietnam, the U.S. Command said.

It was the third encounter between MIGs and U.S. jets in the past five days of intensified aerial warfare. In the two previous engagements, MIGs and U.S. jets fired missiles at each other but missed.

MIGs have been trying to harass American planes striking at the Ho Chi Minh supply trail in Laos. U.S. air blows are designed to check the flow of supplies believed intended for a new enemy offensive in South Vietnam.

Previously, the MIGs had tried to avoid American planes. The last MIG shot down was on March 28, 1970.

Pass Unemployment Bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The key unemployment compensation bill to put Missouri in compliance with federal laws cleared the house today and headed for the desk of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

There was no discussion or argument as the bill was passed 150-0.

An emergency clause, to make it effective as soon as it is signed by the governor, cleared the house on a lopsided vote.

Hearnes asked for quick action on the bill in his message to the legislature at the start of the session. The measure could reach him by Thursday.

The feeling of haste was apparent in the House today as the Economics Committee asked permission to meet while the House acted on other legislation. Approval by that committee is necessary because a substantial expenditure of state money is involved in the bill.

Within minutes the committee came back with its approval and the House granted its consent to take the bill up at once.

Rep. Mark A. Youndahl, DSt. Joseph, said the bill does two things, extends coverage to employes of state hospitals and the University of Missouri and gives jobless workers who already have received the present 26 weeks of benefits, and additional 13 weeks of help.

But it also protects Missouri business and industry from having to pay a 2.7 per cent penalty tax.

Scientists Dismayed

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Some members of the space agency science team are dismayed that scientist-astronauts were limited to three of the nine crew berths for Skylab, an orbiting laboratory designed to study the earth with special sensors and the sun with telescopes.

The first three-man crew is scheduled to spend 28 days aboard the Skylab mission starting next May, and the second two crews are to be aboard 56 days each.

Two pilot-astronauts with little academic background and a physician-astronaut make up the first crew. Each of the remaining two has an astronaut with a doctorate in engineering and two pilot-astronauts.

"If this is a selection which doesn't try to get people of true scientific training on the mission, then we're in trouble," said one scientist who had contributed heavily to the Apollo moon-landing program.

The scientist, like five others who commented unfavorably about the selection, declined to give his name for print because of a close association with the space program.

A flight surgeon said more physicians should have been chosen. Much of the Skylab program is designed to learn about the effects of long-term space travel on the human body, he said, and subtle changes not obvious to the layman could be overlooked by an astronaut without medical training.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Every man likes to have it said of him that he has an interesting personality.

* * *

THE WORLD IS GETTING YOUNGER

While most of us, with each passing day, are all too aware that we are getting older, the world about us — in average age — has been growing younger. And as this trend toward youthfulness continues, it is inevitable that we will see many residual changes.

Compared to, let us say, fifty years ago, young people today get a much earlier start in life. We have more youthful doctors, lawyers, businessmen and even younger millionaires. Today, ten years after starting married life together, it is not at all unusual for young couples to accumulate more than their parents managed in twenty or thirty years. Although the issue was hotly debated, no one was much surprised by the rapid adoption of the 26th Amendment to the Constitution which lowered the voting age in American from 21 to 18. Nor would it be very surprising if another Constitutional proposal, now being mulled in Congress, might lower the age to run for national elections — from 25 to 22 for the House, and from 30 to 27 for the Senate.

In our neighboring nation of Mexico, where seventy per cent of Mexico's 50 million people are under 30 and half of the total population is under 21 years of age, similar steps have already been taken to bring their political representation more in line with the youthful nature of the country's population. Upon the urging of President Luis Echeverria, and with the hearty endorsement of all four of Mexico's major political parties, reforms have been initiated to lower the minimum age for election to the House of Deputies from 25 to 21, and for election to the Senate from 35 to 30. And, since Mexico preceded the United States in lowering the voting age to 18 by almost two years, this latest action on their part may very well presage a similar move here in the United States.

Granted, as the Albuquerque Tribune editorially commented, "the electorate would have to be convinced that the 22-year-old aspirant to a House seat, or the 27-year-old aspirant to the Senate, was an exceptional young person indeed." But these are exceptional days, and we can anticipate all sorts of exceptional things to happen.

'INDIAN FRIENDS'

According to the Indianapolis Star, while India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was in the United States seeking support and aid for her country from the U. S., and while the Indian government is seeking to attract new U. S. investment in the country, the Indian government has acted to nationalize all American insurance companies by executive decree. Some 40 American insurance offices are affected. They do an annual business of about $2 million. And some people wonder why some of us oppose sending more American taxpayers' dollars to help our "Indian friends."

Now that the shooting has about stopped in an Indian military victory over Pakistan, India has suffered another type of defeat.

Its deliberately provocative attacks on its smaller and weaker neighbor have debunked for all time two great myths India has propagandized for years:

2. That it is a peace-loving and non-military nation that does not meddle in the affairs of other countries, and sternly disapproves of others doing so.

2. That it is firmly "neutralist" and "uncommitted" and righteously not beholden to either the East or West.

In the past 20 years, India has received more economic aid from the U. S. than any other country in the world – and shown the least appreciation for the $7 billion poured into India by Uncle Santa in Washington.

At the same time, while self-righteously proclaiming its "neutralism," India has been armed to the teeth by Russia. Hundreds of millions in late-model Soviet planes, guns and other military hardware have gone to India in recent years. Thousands of Indian pilots and other combat personnel have been trained in Russia.

So, in India, playing both sides to the middle -- billions in economic aid from the U.S. and billions in armaments from Russia -- is unctiously designated "neutralism."

This double-dealing drew scathing criticism from Sen. Vance Hartke (D.-Ind.), ranking member of the Finance Committee, when he learned Delhi was covertly sounding out members of Congress and others on taking expense-paid trips to view the "heart-rending" camps of East Bengal refugees. Purpose of these junkets was to promote hostile propaganda against Pakistan, and indirectly, the U. S. for shipping arms there.

Said Hartke: "We have spent billions to keep India's masses from starving, and the Soviet has sent huge sums to arm them. If that isn't breeding war, I don't know what it is. If the Kremlin can arm India, then I say it can also feed India. It's time our country took arealistic look at such glaring and expensive inconsistencies and act accordingly."

This is another reason why more Americans oppose continuing large-scale foreign giveaways -- in the guise of economic aid.

THERE COMES A TIME
WHEN STRENGTH IS MORE
CHARITABLE THAN CHARITY

If America's enemies are victorious, their first action would be to abolish charity. Harsh practicality, self-support-or-else, is all they respect or tolerate — as the pitiable souls of at least three former great nations know only too well.

America can be strong and safe, with no decent person going hungry. But to do so we must at once do without some of our unnecessary frills and costly bureaucracy, until America is strong enough once more (it is not, now) to protect and safeguard the producing men and women and industries on whom the future — the very lives — of the needy and all of us depend.

MAKING DO

While it may be true that "Heaven will protect the working girl," today's liberated career woman takes care of herself. Since she doesn't have much time to primp for an afterwork date — nor does her desk drawer hold all the equipment her bathroom shelf does — she learns to "make do" with what's available. The housewife can easily adapt some of these hints to make her at-home life easier: 1) Can't find your clothes brush? Wrap a length of Scotch double coated tape around your index finger for a quick lint remover. 2) This same tape will hold a finicky blouse-button closed. 3) Scotch book tape will mend a torn boot til you can get to the shoemaker.

FOR STUDENTS,
A CHOICE OF
'THING'

With the help of a $3.6-million grant from the U. S. Office of Education, Berkeley schools will conduct a 2½ -year experiment in offering 24 different educational "alternatives." By the time the program is in full swing next fall, about 5,000 of the city's 15,000 students "will be able to choose from an almost bewildering assortment of school options," says the publication.

If a student wants to attend a small, all-black school, for instance, he can go to Black House. If he wants a Chicano-oriented school, he can go to Casa de la Raza. If he prefers a multicultural approach, he can go to Franklin Multicultural. Or he may want to join On Target, a cooperative program between industry and school.

Other ideas to be tested include a school with student direction, a parent cooperative school, a neighborhood open school, a school-without - walls, a child development center, an off-campus school, bilingual classrooms, learning centers and "free" schools, whatever they are.

One school will explore three alternatives at each grade level, and students will be allowed to change from one type of school option to another any time they choose.

As for any students who don't want a black or white or Chicano or open or student- directed or "free" school, or maybe don't know what they want, or maybe are just looking for a basic, simple, nourishing educational diet instead of a "smorgasbord" — well, possibly a place can be found for them somewhere in the system.

ACTION SPEAKS LOUDER THAN WORDS

Pollution of man's environment has in recent months become a major topic of national debate. Hopefully, this concern will not prove to be the kind of ephemeral fad to which modern nations seem peculiarly disposed. The problem of pollution will be resolved only through patient and steady effort and by the full cooperation of everyone concerned. Pollution is a national problem, not the exclusive problem of particular individuals or groups, Involved in the pollution question are national values, science and technology, politics, industry, economic preferences of consumers and geography.

That numerous factors contribute to the pollution problem has not prevented critics of private industry from exploiting present emotion on the subject. They have latched onto the issue for the purpose of discrediting industry as a whole. Their Holy War is premised on the untenable notion that businessmen alone have created the pollution problem. It is a narrow vision which sees private enterprise as a scapegoat.

The magnitude of the environmental pollution problem can be grasped by considering the sheer impact of the numbers of people and the unavoidable pollution that they create. Some 200 million tons of garbage are generated in private homes every year...one ton per person. Waste presently discharged into bodies of water exceeds five million tons a year. Columnist Ralph de Toledano states the problem succinctly: "...every American contributes his mite even as he drives down to the corner drugstore to buy medication for the ills of pollution."

Yes, there is a pollution problem. But, to indict private industry as the culprit is to grossly misstate the issue. Indications are that industry is doing something about pollution, while some of its critics, it seems, have not progressed beyond verbal abuse.

The newspaper editor was busy at his desk, doing nothing, when the phone rang. On the line was an irate subscriber. "I noticed in your paper," the reader shouted, "that you printed I was dead!"

"Zatso?" was the indifferent retort. "Where are you speaking from now?"

A NEW APPROACH

One of the highest unemployment rates in every part of the nation exists among Negro teen-agers. Because this is a serious problem contributing to racial tension, delinquency and crime in most of our large cities, the approach taken to solving it by a leading bank in Portland, Oregon, is of particular interest.

The bank gave a $10,000 grant to five Negro students from a major metropolitan high school The students were selected by the school administration. With virtually no strings attached, the grant was provided for the establishment of a corporation which would provide jobs for black youngsters of high school age. In the process, these young people would benefit from a real learning experience in the free enterprise system and in business management, which would in most cases not otherwise be available to them. The new enterprise, established as the Malcom X Corp., is now employing 22 black teen-agers and is successfully manufacturing and selling wood industrial pallets for loading and storage. The business will provide continuous jobs for a varying number of young Negro students, and profits will help finance college scholarships for others.

Certainly the action taken by this one bank represents an original and highly promising approach to solving a difficult national problen. It is an effort worthy of duplication by other firms in all parts of the United States.

The two stoned hippies were staggering along a railroad track when one tiredly complained to the other, "I sure wish we'd get to the bottom of this flight of stairs."

"The stairs aren't the worst of it," grumbled the second. "It's the low handrail that bugs me."

THE YEAR THAT WAS

Nineteen seventy-one, the nation was assured by the President about this time 12 months ago, was going to be a good year and 1972 was going to be even better. All things are relative, as they say, so we suppose that 1971——a year in which unemployment averaged just a shade under 6 per cent and the rate of inflation was a shade under 5 per cent——was a good year by comparison with 1970.

Of course everyone remembers 1970. That was the year in which all the lines on all the graphs quit zig-zagging and simply zagged, thereby making it officially a year of recession. The first in a decade. So, by comparison, 1971 was a good year. Of course, the President didn't tell the country a year ago that he defined a good year as one in which unemployment was almost 6 per cent and the inflation rate was almost 5 per cent. He said, in fact, that the gross national product would rise by 11.6 per cent; it is expected to rise by 5.2 per cent. He predicted, too, that unemployment like the war, would wind down until by year's end, we had only a residual force of jobless amounting to 5 per cent, perhaps ever so slightly more; we ended the year with an unemployment rate of 6.1 per cent.

The 5,000,000 Americans who cannot find work may not think it reassuring that things were even worse in 1970, when inflation was eroding the value of their unemployment compensation payments even faster than in 1971. Indeed, they might well wonder how it was that the Nixon Administration could propose (and get from Congress) a 6-billion-dollar reduction in corporate income taxes in 1971, while being unable to afford welfare reform or revenue sharing and only reluctantly accepting a modest Government-sponsored program to create jobs.

At least half of the unemployment consists of teenagers who can't vote, blacks who are generally Democrats whether they have jobs or not, and women whose husbands have jobs and for whom unemployment is not, therefore, a calamity. So, perhaps, it is the kind of people who make up the unemployed that explains why the White House seems almost indifferent to their great numbers. And so, too, perhaps for the White House, if not for the nation's jobless, 1971 was a good year.——Post-Dispatch.

LUX ET VERITAS

Although violence in our nation's colleges and universities appears to have died down temporarily, the situation on the campuses is far from ideal. Students, teachers and guest speakers who stand for constructive values are often riduculed, prevented from speaking and threatened. College administrators have allowed this situation to develop and usually refuse to take any action to improve it.

On the campus of Yale University, a group of students decided to take some of the steps that the administration would not. These students, along with some alumni, have formed an association called Lux et Veritas, "light and truth," to help create an atmosphere conducive to scholarship rather than revolution.

The members drafted a statement of rights and responsibilities. They listed activities "improper in a university" which are "grounds for suspension and dismissal"; physical violence against others on the campus, violation of the right to speak and teach, and "obstruction of the normal functioning of the activities of the university."

These are minimal responsibilities which the administration should enforce automatically. Yet far leftists have so infiltrated higher education that it is now up to constructive students to spell out the conditions necessary for proper education to take place.

Constructive students on campuses throughout the nation should get together with each other and like-minded members of the faculty in order to proclaim their allegiance to sound values and their determination to resist the farleft ideology dominating higher education today. In this way they will be able to counteract much of the harm which higher education has done to our country, especially in the last few years. HLH.

NEW YORK (AP) — As every husband comes to realize, no man knows a woman until he marries her.

Even then, as the slow years mutter their way to eternity, he is never really certain he comprehends her nature fully. He is sure, however, of certain changes in her.

For example, when they first met she loved to go on long walks with him, and she'd halftrot at his side for miles without wearying. Today she couldn't even walk down the altar with him again without yelling for a taxi.

During their courtship, she ransacked the cookbooks to find new recipes to try on him, and he'd put on an apron and help do the dishes. But it has been years now since he has done anything in the kitchen, and he complains that her cuisine specialty is "four-day hash."

"You tell me who you want for president," she said in earlier years, "and I'll vote for him. I don't know anything about politics." What happened? Well, she thinks now that she knows everything about politics. Whoever her husband is for, she votes against—and insists on giving reasons.

He told her he didn't want any children for fear that having them might hurt her. She said that no, they must have two children—to ,be named Jack and Jill. She ended up having five children.

Marriage, she told him firmly before the ceremony, mustn't be the end of her career. She wanted to "be somebody" and make the most of her talents. Her talent, it turned out, was cheerleading. For the last 25 years she has been trying to pep talk him into working harder and making more money.

There was a time when she prided herself on washing her own tresses and making her own dresses. Now her annual bills for coiffure and clothes would pay for a paint job on the Statue of Liberty. But she still shows up for breakfast looking as if she had spent the night whirling around in a laundry machine.

Wasn't she gay and lovely, the day they came back from their honeymoon and raced up three flights of stairs to their 1½-room love nest in the slums? Oh, well, don't all such days pass? Now she mopes because the cathedral living room in their 10-room house in the suburbs looks so gauche.

Their quarrels once were as brief and impromptu as summer storms, he recalls wistfully, and were followed immediately by loving and laughing. But now, he feels, "she starts jabbing at me on Friday night and is still at it on Monday morning." They are weekend horrors.

She was so hopeful and cheerful as they took the first steps on their long path together. Now she has decided that her future has become her past.

Dumbly her husband wonders what he did wrong to make things turn out this way.

Nothing at all. The girl of his dreams merely married him. Time, the chief villain of our lives, did the rest.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

This, at least, is the latest reckoning of Jimmy the Greek Snyder, the Las Vegas oddsmaker, whom we have signed up to give pollsters George Gallup and Lou Harris some competition in making presidential predictions.

The Greek now rates Muskie a 5-to-2 favorite to win the nomination, an improvement over the 5-to-3 odds by which Jimmy favored the Maine Democrat a month ago.

However, Jimmy considers President Nixon as 8-to-5 bet to beat Muskie. This is a slight improvement over the 7-to-5 odds last month. The President is also given an 11-to-5 advantage over Senator Ted Kennedy and a 3-to-1 wager over anyone else who might wind up with the Democratic nomination.

The Greek also has good news for Vice President Agnew. The latest soundings have convinced Jimmy that Agnew is now a 10-1 choice of renomination, a dramatic rise from his 2-to-1 rating a month ago.

BAFFLING BROOKINGS

Jimmy's political prognostications have baffled the scholars at Washington's prestigious Brookings Institution, who are employed to worry about the world's great problems, to explain the present and to divine the future. They reach their conclusions with the use of the computers, sophisticated data and sheer brainpower.

But the institution's staff met it's match on the day Jimmy the Greek came to call. Millions of ordinary Americans could have given odds on that. Jimmy is as much a part of American sports as the forward pass.

From his Las Vegas headquarters, Jimmy sets the point spreads on football, games, makes the odds on championship fights and calls the winners in major political contests. He comes up with the right results often enough that many with a sporting urge wouldn't risk a nickel wager without consulting his predictions.

The scholars at Brookings invited him to come to their once-a-month informal gathering where they pick the brains of the mighty. He regaled them with anecdotes, beat beat their computer at football and blackjack and discussed his methods of reckoning.

Some of the thinkers were disappointed. "There was nothing deep," one complained. "He has a crude system. He even hires bartenders as pollsters."

Other Brookings staff members had warmer feelings. "He uses common sense," said one, with admiration.

NEVER WRONG

He began his political predictions in 1948, when he cleaned up on Harry Truman's victory over Thomas E. Dewey. Jimmy hasn't been wrong about a presidential election since.

The Greek's odds are based on delegate strength, financial backing, staff organization and poll ratings. He surveys political writers in all states, but keeps a particularly sharp eye on the bellwether states of Ohio and Illinois.

Here is a full listing of Jimmy's odds: (If the number listed first is larger, the candidate is an underdog. If the first number is smaller, the candidate is a favorite. Thus Muskie, 2-to-5, is favored while Humphrey, 4-to-1, is an underdog.

Who will be the Democratic Presidential Nominee? Sen. Ed Muskie, 2- to 5; Sen. Hubert Humphrey, 4 - to 1; Sen. Henry Jackson, 5 to 1; Sen. Ted Kennedy, 20 to 1; May. John Lindsay, 50 to 1: Gov. George Wallace, 50 to 1; Rep. Wilbur Mills 200 to 1; Eugene McCarthy, 200 to 1; Sen. Vance Hartke, 200 to 1; Mayor Sam Yorty, 500 to 1, Shirley Chisholm, 500 to 1; dark horse, 50 to 1.

Who will be the Democratic Vice Presidential nominee? Sen. Henry Jackson 2 to 1; Sen. Edward Kennedy, 3 to 1; Sen. Walter Mondale, 8 to 1; Sen. Birch Bayh, 8 to 1; Sen. George McGovern, 8 to 1; Rep. Wilbur Mills, 8 to 1; Mayor John Lindsay, 10 to 1; Sen. Harold Hughes, 20 to 1; Sen. Vance Hartke, 20 to 1; Sen. John Tunney, 10 to 1; Rep. Shirley Chisholm, 200 to 1; Mayor Sam Yorty, 200 to 1; Gov. George Wallace, 100 to 1.

Who will be the Republican Vice Presidential Nominee? Vice President Agnew, 1 to 10 ; Treasury Secretary John Connally, 10 to 1; drk horse, 20 to 1.

Who will win the election? President Nixon, 5 to 8 against Sen. Muskie; 5 to 11 over Sens. Humphrey of Jackson; 5 to 13 against Sen. Kennedy; 1 to 3 against anyone else.

We asked Jimmy why McGovern, an announced candidate who has stayed in the race two years, could be rated below Kennedy, who swears he is not a candidate.

"McGovern's no where in the polls," says Jimmy," and I can't find any delegate strength for him. He seems to take advantage of issues and gets good exposure. but none of it seems to make a dent."

So Jimmy gives New York Major John Lindsay and Alabama's Governor George Wallace as good as chance as McGovern to get the Democratic nomination.

Action Due Soon On Trade And Devaluation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration hopes to tie the knot on major new trade deals and send its dollar-devaluation bill to Congress by early February, a high Treasury official says.

The trade package and the dollar-devaluation measure go hand in hand, Paul Volcker, undersecretary for monetary affairs, told newsmen Tuesday. He said he sees no difficulties in trade negotiations.

"The trade package is going to be wrapped up, I feel quite sure," he said. "I think we can make it by that date (early February). I think it's in everybody's interest."

Volcker, an architect of President Nixon's international economic policy, held a rare onthe-record news conference, the first since he was instrumental in the international monetary settlement reached last Dec. 18.

He declined to be specific on negotiations with the nation's major trading partners. As part of the deal to devalue the dollar, the United States has insisted that Japan, Canada and the Common Market countries agree to some trading concessions.

Volcker said he sees no trouble with the dollar-devaluation bill, predicting that Congress "will deal with this legislation expeditiously." Technically, the dollar would be devalued by raising the price of gold from $35 to $38 an ounce. In foreign exchange markets, that amounts to a devaluation of 7.89 per cent.

On other topics, the undersecretary said:

—The Nixon administration will roll up a "very substantial deficit" in fiscal 1972, and the 1973 budget due to go to Congress next Monday will be deeply in the red. But Volcker said both deficits are justified under current slack economic conditions. Other sources said the budget deficit for fiscal 1972 may reach almost $40 billion, the biggest in 27 years.

—He does not expect the monetary agreement, in which a new system of currency exchange rates was immediately put into effect, will become unstuck.

—The impact of the agreement, which makes imports more expensive and U.S. exports to other countries cheaper, may be slow in coming where the big U.S. balance-oftrade deficit is concerned. The first impact on the trade balance may be adverse, he said, since the demand for higherpriced imports may continue at a high level through the early part of 1972.

—The big flow of dollars expected from Europe as a result of the monetary agreement has failed to materialize for two reasons. First, he said, U.S. interest rates are too low to draw foreign investors' cash; second, the dollar is at its ceiling in foreign exchange markets.

Volcker said he believes the new international monetary agreement will work well if "we do a good job at home" in pursuing effective economic policies.

The big economic bright spot last year was in housing.

The Commerce Department reported that the homebuilding pace set a record last year, with a total of 2,048,200 units beating by 7 per cent the previous mark set in 1950. In December, the homebuilding pace was even stronger, reaching a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2,517,000 units, another record.

Commerce officials said housing will continue to be strong this year, with lower interest rates and money available.

Bank Bomb Fugitive Indicted On 16 Counts

CHICAGO (AP) — Ronald Kaufman, an AWOL Army private who authorities say may have fled the country, has been indicted on 16 counts connected with the placing of bombs in three Chicago banks.

The indictment returned Tuesday by a federal grand jury charged that on or about July 16, 1971, Kaufman carried explosive devices into the banks and put them in safety deposit boxes.

It also charged that Kaufman used the U.S. mails to send letters to news media representatives detailing what the devices were and where they could be found. The letters were mailed on Jan. 5 and 6.

The FBI has said fingerprints on the letters showed that Kaufman had handled them.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson, who announced the indictment in Chicago, said the FBI has completed investigations into similar bombs found at three banks in New York and three in San Francisco. No indictments have been returned in these cases.

The Chicago indictment listed four aliases for Kaufman - Christopher Charles Mohr, Christopher Curtis Mohr, James Edward Jensen and Charles F. Owens.

The FBI said Kaufman, 33, enlisted in the Army last Aug. 10 under the Jensen name. He was scheduled to be shipped overseas with his unit Jan. 9 but never showed up.

Nursing Home Bills Advance

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A House committee Tuesday night approved two nursing home measures aimed at licensing illegal nursing homes and increasing state welfare money for nursing home care.

Both measures carry a $6 million plus price tag and will have to be referred to the House Economics Committee for approval.

Rep. Charles Dickey, D-Mexico, sponsor of both measures and committee chairman, said he has been assured of assistance from House leaders in getting the bills through the tough Economics Committee.

Flu Epidemic Blamed For At Least 15 Deaths In Oklahoma

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oklahoma health officials, hoping school closings and warnings to the public would help break the fever of a raging flu epidemic, are sweating out the first confirmed report of a case of A-2, Hong Kong-68 flu this year in the state.

At least 15 deaths in Oklahoma have been attributed to the flu. By Tuesday night 30 of the state's 77 counties were at epidemic or near-epidemic stage and 23 schools had closed to hold the line on the virus' spread.

Dr. Stanley Ferguson, state epidemiologist, said the first case of Hong Kong flu was confirmed Tuesday in Grady County. Tests from patients in other portions of the state struck by influenza won't be ready for about another week.

The Hong Kong flu is extremely contagious and could be serious to persons with heart and lung ailments, he said.

"We do have a vaccine," said Dr. Ferguson, "but it is too late to do any good now." It would take weeks for the vaccine to become effective after innoculation.

The flu outbreak seems to be increasing, said Dr. Ferguson, but he added the illness is not usually serious among young, healthy persons.

"It doesn't look as if this is on the wane yet," he said. "In fact, in many areas it appears we haven't reached a peak."

Schools scattered across the state are empty today, and businesses in some areas have been reporting absentee rates of up to 20 per cent.

In Jackson County around Altus, hospitals were filled to capacity and the county schools reported 600 youngsters absent Monday. And in McIntosh County in the east-central section, Dr. Maurice Payne, county health director, labeled flu conditions as "severe," with hospitals operating at full capacity.

Some schools were closed in Muskogee County, and classes also were out at Garber in Garfield County, Ringwood in Major County, and Warner and Ft. Gibson in eastern Oklahoma.

Officials in some areas said a decision might be made today whether to close schools because of increasing absentee rates.

In Tulsa, school officials reported the student absentee rate was 12 per cent, four times as high as normal, and 232 teachers were out Tuesday. The officials said that, normally, 60 teachers are absent on any given day.

Florida Democrats To Have 10 Choices In March 14 Primary

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Florida Democrats will have 10 candidates to choose from when they go to the polls March 14 to name their preference for the party's presidential nomination.

The state candidates selection board kept Gov. George Wallace of Alabama on the ballot despite "grave reservations" expressed by the state party chairman, retained Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles against the candidate's wishes and rejected Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas.

State Democratic Chairman Jon Moyle said he assumed Wallace would participate "in good faith and not play games with Florida Democrats."

Despite his personal reservations, Moyle said, he assumed Wallace delegates would pledge not to oppose the nominee of the National Democratic Convention. The loyalty oath apparently would prevent Wallace from naming American Independent party regulars as Florida delegates to the national convention.

Yorty, who is campaigning in the New Hampshire primary, asked that his name be removed from the Florida ballot, but Democrats on the committee voted 2 to 1 that he is a presidential contender and therefore should be listed.

Moyle insisted that Mills is not a candidate and therefore should not have his name on the primary list, although he often has been mentioned as a possible contender.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, who signed an affidavit saying he is not a candidate, also had his name removed.

Those whose names were placed on the Democratic ballot are: Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, Sens. Vance Hartke of Indiana, Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Henry M. Jackson of Washington, Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, Sens. George McGovern of South Dakota and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, Wallace and Yorty.

On the Republican ballot are President Nixon and Reps. John M. Ashbrook of Ohio and Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California.

Kennedy, who delivered a broad attack against Nixon administration policies Monday, was rebuked Tuesday by three top Republicans.

Kennedy said tens of thousands of people will die in Indochina this year because "President Nixon will not allow the Saigon government to falter until he is secure at home for another term of office."

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said the Massachusetts Democrat owed Nixon an apology for his "intemperate and immature statements."

Replying to a Kennedy remark that the Nixon administration doesn't trust the American people, House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan said:

"Of all issues which the junior senator from Massachusetts might raise among the American people, the question of trust seems least likely to serve his interests." Kennedy is his state's senior senator.

Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, the Republican national chairman, called Kennedy's speech "the usual cacaphony of mindless negativism" and his criticisms "simply untrue."

In other political developments Tuesday, Muskie told about 1,000 people at a Kenosha, Wis., political rally that Nixon's 1968 campaign slogan "'Bring us together' was a promise whose implications I don't believe he fully understands."

Discarding his prepared text criticizing the President's economic policies, the Maine Democrat said administration policies have inspired division, mistrust and discrimination.

Muskie drew his loudest applause when he said he hopes Nixon can remove the Vietnam issue from the campaign by withdrawing all U.S. troops from Indochina.

"I don't want the issue," he said. "I want our men back."

But McGovern said in New Hampshire the war will remain an issue regardless of Nixon's troop withdrawal program because the President "could have stopped the war in 1969."

Chairman Charles Briody of the People's party, which currently is pushing Dr. Benjamin Spock for president, said he and former Sen. Eugene McCarthy had agreed "that if Humphrey or Muskie or Jackson was the Democratic candidate the only way that Nixon can be defeated would be to form a fourth party ...."

Briody, who met with McCarthy in Washington, said the fourth party effort would be designed to deny any candidate an electoral-vote majority and throw the election into the House of Representatives, which is controlled by Democrats and could be expected to choose a Democratic president.

Briody said McCarthy indicated he would support a fourth party even if he weren't that party's presidential candidate.

McCloskey, who challenged the President primarily because of their differences on Indochina policies, predicted that lagging support for Nixon in New Hampshire would force him to campaign in the state's March 7 primary despite his announced intention not to do so.

Jackson's campaign headquarters announced the Washington senator will visit seven states in the next eight weeks.

School System Closed By Flu

TUSCUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — With a 30 per cent absentee rate among pupils because of influenza, Tuscumbia schools closed Tuesday for the rest of the week.

C. H. Stringer, superintendent, said "there is too much sickness" and "it seems like it's growing bigger." Several teachers also were out because of illness.

Schools are scheduled to reopen Monday.

Old Furniture Collecting Started Early In Marriage

MRS. LEWEY HEATH in the living room of her home that is filled with turn of the century furniture. The tables are of walnut and have marble tops. The lamp is a temp-Dematio made in Italy.

Mrs. Lewey Heath, route one, East Prairie, has a genuine love for antiques. Her home is filled with furniture that she began collecting early in her married life.

"I wouldn't know what to do if I went into a furniture store to buy furniture" she said.

"I've bought my furniture in junk shops, from other people and at rummage sales."

"I go to places other people wouldn't even think of going," she laughed. "Rummage sales are really great places to go because you find people selling cut glass, sometimes flat ware and silver and linens.

"My attic is full of bargains I have picked up over the years, but the one thing you don't want to do is buy a piece of furniture that is junk. Check to see if it is solid wood and not broken or cracked," she added. "Much of the furniture made during the war and the depression years was made of veneered wood and is just not the quality of earlier years."

Looking through Mrs. Heath's house one can tell she has always bought good furniture. She has several solid and walnut tables topped with marble. The coffee table in her living room and two end tables are marble-topped solid walnut with ornate legs.

Her couch is Victorian, stuffed and upholstered in a light green damask material. She is not sure how old the lamps in the living room are, but they are temp-Dematio, made in Italy, and blend well with the rest of the decor.

The living room also contains her newest piece of furniture, a desk she ordered 35 or 40 years ago from Bennett Brothers.

"A dealer recently offered me $950 for my dining room table but I just couldn't sell it. My husband thought I was crazy for refusing," she said.

The dining room chairs are walnut and have grape carvings. Mrs. Heath did the needlepoint on the chair seats covers.

She has a fondness for the grape pattern which can be found on furniture and other pieces throughout the house.

The bedrooms house huge, well- preserved old fashioned bedroom suites with hand crocheted coverlets on the beds. The coverlets are rummage sale finds.

"I was never the type of person to dig into our savings when I wanted something or to ask my husband for it. I would always find a way to earn the necessary money myself. I sold vacuum cleaners, Stanley products and had a flower shop in East Prairie until about eight years ago," she related.

She has a silver coffee server dated March 26, 1872.

The kitchen is more like a "keeping room", such as families used to have. The fireplace gives it a warm, cozy, comfortable atmosphere. The cooking stove is fashioned after the old iron cookstoves our great grandmothers used. It is electric but has a warming oven similar to original iron cookstoves.

Mr. and Mrs. Heath built their home in 1940 after they had been married for eight years. The original house had four rooms without running water. They later remodeled and it now has a living room, dining room, kitchen- family room combination, two bedrooms, two and one half baths, a utility room and double car garage with a brick floor.

Her dream is to have her own antique shop.

"I would love to have a building where I could display all of my finds. I would like to have it behind the house, and people could call me or make appointments, but my husband says if you are going to have a business you should stick with it. I like to go too much to be tied down all the time," she laughed.

Mrs. Heath enjoys people and showing her house and recently let the Women's Civic Club of Sikeston tour her home.

Assisting her were Mrs. Bill Lough of Charleston and Mrs. Noah Heath of East Prairie.

Ann Landers

Pediatrician Has The Right Answer

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to say a word or two to the girl whose boyfriend laid a sloppy, wet goodnight kiss on her and who signed herself "Turned Off." Maybe this letter will help her as well as other young girls to understand a few things better.

When I was 16 I was terribly shy but more of a man, physically, than a boy. I was really nutty over a certain chick and I had been dying to kiss her for three months before I finally got up the courage to try. It was a beautiful moonlit night and I was driving her home from a great party. When I took her to the door she lingered awhile making small talk. I finally said "goodnight," and she turned her face up and closed her eyes. I read this as an invitation I'd been waiting for. When I bent down for my very first romantic kiss, my nose hit hers, my front tooth bumped her lip, and I bit her.

Thank the good Lord she had a wonderful sense of humor. She also knew I was humiliated. Bless her understanding heart, she started to laugh, and so did I. At that moment I was so grateful for her compassion that she endeared herself to me forever. Eight years later I married that doll.

When I read the letter in your column from the girl who complained because the guy's first kiss was like amateur night, I knew I had to write in defense of every scared, awkward Romeo in the world. P. S. The chick and I both send our love. --- St. Louis

Dear S. L.: What a heart warmer! And now, if anyone else has a first kiss story with a moral, let's have it.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: After reading the letter from Relaxed Ma in Sherman, Texas, I decided to write my first letter to Ann Landers.

I also had a feeding problem with my baby. It was something new because my other kids were good eaters. I was afraid this child had a serious stomach disorder because he wouldn't eat a thing.

When he was seven months old I took him to the pediatrician. He agreed the boy was starving to death and asked the ages of my other children. I told him 6, 4, 3, and 2, and he replied, "I'm not surprised." Then he went on to explain that this child was starving for affection. He suggested that I keep the baby close to my body all day long. I thought this was insane but he explained that I should strap the child to my back so he could feel the closeness of me.

I decided I had better listen to him, so I made an Indian papoose bag out of gingham yard goods. I carried that child on my back from morning til night. He was on my back when I did the cooking, when I ran after the other four, when I did the cleaning and the marketing and when I hung out the clothes. By the time he was nine months old he was handing me the clothes pins, one by one. The neighbors thought it was a scream. But the child started eating, so I didn't care what the neighbors thought.

The boy is three years old now and he is my healthiest and happiest child. What he needed was love. My doctor knew what he was talking about. If it hadn't been for him that boy would not be alive today. Please print my letter. It might help someone else. --- Eleven Steps in Virginia

Dear Eleven: Your doctor sounds like a honey. Please tell him I said so. He's my kind of pediatrician.

Artists Execute Designs In Needlepoint For Chairs

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Nantucket . . . The hostess with the mostes' in the future may need to compete with crafts and furnishings that can be displayed in an art gallery. One well-known hostess here, Mimsi Harbach, has just had eight of her dining room chairs with their unique needlepoint seats which were designed by artists, displayed at the Lobster Pot Gallery.

It all began when Mimsi, who is Mrs. Robert Harbach — he is the son of Otto Harbach of "No No Nanette" fame — had thought of covering her dining chairs with needlepoint designs painted by some of the Island's well-known artists to get a true flavor of the surroundings.

Commissioning the artists was one thing, but getting the designs adapted to needlepoint was quite another, she explains.

"It's the tricky part of such a project," comments J. Floyd Smith, president of the Nantucket Needleworks, who adapted the needle point to canvas. "Limitations imposed by canvas makes flowing curves very difficult, and color definition that may look great on paper can be flat and uninteresting to canvas. In this instance the artists were sympathetic and willing to adjust their designs to the necessary disciplines imposed by the medium."

The designs chosen by the artists and approved by Mrs. Harbach were in keeping with the family and the surroundings. Virginia Greenleaf Koch designed a leafy bouquet with a favorite musical design motif of the family, the opening notes of "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," the famous Otto Harbach lyric of the 20s.

Maggie Meredith, well-known for her cat paintings, did one of her female cats in a droopy flower-garlanded hat with the usual "love" inscription. There are love apples by Robert Reimer and a bright poppies floral by well-known Andrew Shunney. A foggy Nantucket harbor was painted by Gerald Taber.

The eight designs are just a beginning, says Mrs. Harbach. She has ten more to go to complete the eighteen needed for the several dining rooms in her large house on Main Street where the family chooses to eat indoors much of the time when they are entertaining during the five months they spend at the house.

"The house is full of needlepoint, much of it done by my husband's mother," the popular blonde hostess explains. "Nantucket has meant so much to our family that I wanted something permanent to pass on to them as a symbol of our time."

PHONE BOOK ODDITY

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — There was something missing in about 50 copies of the 1971 Albuquerque metropolitan telephone directory. The alphabetical list of subscribers in the copies went only as far as the Smiths. About 63 white page listings were missing.

A Mountain Bell spokesman said the abbreviated book was caused by a mechanical failure at the printing shop.

He said about 50 books were published before the error was noticed.

HEARTLESS THIEVES

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — Police said burglars broke into the Bruce Campbell home recently and took jewelry, cash, clothing and appliances valued at more than $1,500.

Soldier Advertises Love For Wife

KANSAS CITY (AP) — William A. McNab's wife thinks he is the kind of man who "goes overboard" with gifts and poetry to her, so she wasn't surprised at the two-paragraph advertisement in the Kansas City Star.

"My darling Vicky. Though I am thousands of miles away on this very special day, I want you to know you are in my thoughts and in my heart in a very special way," it began.

McNab, who is in the Army in Vietnam, wished his wife a happy third wedding anniversary Monday, thanked her for being a loving wife and praised her for "giving me a beautiful purpose in living."

Mrs. McNab, 22, said "He wrote me a letter telling me to make sure I read the paper on our anniversary so I imagined there would be something in there for me."

She said her husband write's poetry frequently. "About once a month I can expect a letter that's just a poem," she said.

The McNabs met while both were stationed at Ft. Meade, Md. Mrs. McNab served about a year in the Women's Army Corps.

They became engaged after a brief courtship but she broke the engagement and moved to Kansas City with her mother. McNab followed to change her mind and it took about two months to do so.

Mrs. McNab and the couple's two sons, Matthew Guy and Robert Cyril, now are with her mother, Mrs. Shirley Cumberland.

What about the advertisement?

"I really think it's kind of beautiful," Mrs. McNab said, "that a man who's supposed to hide his feelings can love somebody enough that he doesn't care if the whole world knows it.

POLLY'S POINTERS

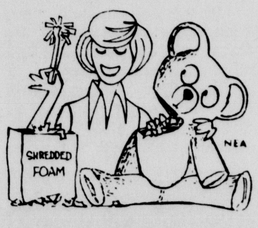
Mending Those Holes In Drapery Backings

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Kathy H. wants to patch the holes in the thermal backing on her draperies, so I suggest cutting tiny pieces of adhesive tape to fit in the holes. Since this tape is waterproof it might not have to be replaced after each washing.—MRS. L. R.

DEAR POLLY—After reading Kathy H's problem with holes in the thermal (rubberlike) backing to her draperies, I want to tell her and the other girls how I clean my foam-backed draperies. Dampen a towel and place towel and draperies in your dryer, set on "Air" or "Fluff" cycle. They come out looking like new and can be hung immediately. If all draperies cannot be done at one time, be sure to use a clean towel with each new load—S. M.

DEAR GIRLS — Readymade thermal-lined draperies may be marked "Hand Washable," "Machine Washable" or "Dry Clean," so be sure to check on which kind you have. It is wise to always save such labels to avoid disaster.—POLLY



DEAR POLLY — I use salad or weiner tongs when stuffing toys, animals, dolls and small pillows with shredded foam.

When my daughter's identical twins were babies, she marked the toe nails of one with a bit of red nail polish so she could identify them. (POLLY'S NOTE — My twins wore silver bracelets with their names on them until they could talk. Such bracelets are great gifts to give twin babies.)

When I want to rip a seam, I place part of the material under the foot of my sewing machine, put the foot down, then hold the other part while I cut the stitching with a sharp razor blade.—FLORENCE

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I am ready to apply for a nice soft bed in a rest home. I have just finished sorting 64 socks for my husband and three sons who all wear dark colors, mostly navy but there are so many shades of navy. No wonder sorting socks heads my list of housekeeping dislikes. I have tried marking each person's with a different color of thread but this is time-consuming for so many and the thread comes out after a few washings. It is too cold here to go barefooted. I do hope some reader has a solution to my problem. Thanks and do sock it to me.—MARIAN

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is with flour sacks. Why can't flour be bagged in a way that would eliminate all that mess and powder that settles on everything around when it is being emptied into a canister. Just getting a bag open is a chore I hate.—MRS. L. S.

Defense Sparks Lilbourn

LILBOURN — Defense, spearheaded by guards Pat McClarty and Grant Dambach, sparked the Daily Standard's seventh ranked Lilbourn Panthers to an 80-75 upset of fourthrated Charleston Tuesday night.

Coach Larry Warren got some big defensive plays from his starting guards, who drew eight charging fouls between them, and used an inspired rebounding force led by Billy Wheeler to avenge an earlier loss the LHS cagers suffered in the title game of the Cape Girardeau tournament.

Offensively the Panthers were more balanced than the visiting Bluejays. LHS placed five players in double figures while Charleston had four hit in twin figures.

Lilbourn jumped out to a seven point lead in the first quarter after holding as much as a 11-point advantage midway in the period. Charleston battled back behind the sharp shooting of Alvin Pierce in the second quarter to close within two points and then went ahead in the third by three, 60-57, before the Panther defense went to work and checked the CHS offense to 15 points in the final period.

Wheeler led Lilbourn in scoring and rebounding, notching 18 in each catagory. McClarty and David Williams added 16 each. Grant Dambach slipped in 13 and Cleo Willis contributed 11. Pierce topped all scorers on the night with his 24 point total. Albri Cassell had 16 for the Bluejays second highest.

The victory raised the LHS cagers season record to 14-3, having lost to Richland, East Prairie and Charleston.

Charleston opened the night's hardwood action with a come from behind 66-62 win paced by George Rodgers 32 points. Claude McFerren had 17 for Lilbourn's high.

Committees Under Pressure

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Legislative committees will be operating under mid this third calendar week of the 1972 legislative session.

Never in recent history have committees buckled down to so heavy schedules so early in a session. Part of the credit, of course, goes to the authority to file bills before the second regular session of a term starts.

Many bills have been authorized for both houses since Dec. 1 and the lawmakers have taken substantial advantage of the change from the old procedure of not introducing legislation until the new session convenes.

Dramatic evidence of the new speedup is the fact that the Employment Security Committee of the House has scheduled a hearing Tuesday on the strict unemployment compensation compliance bill that the Senate fought over and finally passed last Thursday.

With comparable dispatch, the Senate Airports Committee will consider the Missouri-St. Louis Airport Authority bill Wednesday. It passed the House Thursday as an effort to make sure that any new major airport in the St. Louis metropolitan area is built in Missouri.

The unemployment compensation bill caused days of turmoil and filibuster in the Senate this past week, even though many labor groups, business and industry organizations and Gov. Warren E. Hearnes ured its speedy enactment.

Meanwhile a labor-supported version of the unemployment compensation bill,providing extra benefits for jobless workers, is ready for debate in the House. Some business interests have already said fear the House will pass it speedily but hold up on the strict compliance bill from the Senate until the Senate acts favorably on the laborsponsored bill.

The labor-oriented House bill would boost weekly benefits, provide unemployment payments during any period of a lockout and eliminate the present waiting week.

The tussles there should be enough to occupy any legislative body for a few days. But committee will be active on a lot of other major legislation during the coming week. Consider:

Tougher restrictions against air and water pollution— to a Dunklin County Committee Monday evening.

A new try for an acceptable re-alignment of congressional districts, an issue that lost last year because of House-Senate conflicts and one that may now have to be decided by the federal courts—Monday afternoon in the Senate Apportionment Committee.

A Missouri law to put this state in compliance with a federal requirement that persons between 18 and 21 years of age be allowed to vote—Senate elections committee Wednesday night.

Give 18-year-olds all adult rights and responsibilities—the right to marry, make contracts, drink liquor and so on—Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday afternoon.

Public defender law to provide paid legal counsel for indigents—House Judiciary Committee Tuesday night.

Allow furloughs for good risk prisoners to make bedside visits, attend funerals, seek jobs or medical treatment—House Judiciary Committee Tuesday night and Senate Corrections Committee Tuesday afternoon.

New maximum security facility for incorrigibles from the Boonville Training School for Boys—Senate Corrections Committee Tuesday afternoon.

There are a lot more in the areas of education, welfare, transportation and ecology. Although many are repeaters from earlier sessions the main thing is they're getting given committee hearings earlier than ever before.

That means either a quick death or a far greater chance of passage by both houses.

TV Viewing Leads Some But Not All Children To Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — A television viewing may lead to violent acts by some children already prone to aggressiveness, a U.S. Surgeon General's report concluded Monday.

"The accumulated evidence, however, does not warrant the conclusion that televised violence has a uniformly adverse effect, nor the conclusion that it has an adverse effect on the majority of children," said the 12 behavioral scientists who studied the problem for 2½ years.

"The trouble with this report is that like so much of what the administration has done on these things, the cynicism of anyody being interested in the truth is apparent from the beginning," he said.

Johnson criticized the decision by former Surgeon General William H. Stewart to veto 7 of the 40 persons selected by the committee.

The 12 scientists, in the fields of psychology, child development, sociology, psychiatry, political science and anthropology, said they feel there was a serious error in the selection process.

"This study is not a whitewash," Surgeon General Jesse L. Steinfeld told a news conference. "The study shows for the first time a strong connection between violence on television and subsequent aggressive behavior by children."

The study's primary benefit, he said, should be to stimulate more research on the effects of television violence.

"I do believe the data ... should provide the basis for intelligent action by the networks, the FCC and Congress," he said.

The study was requested March 5, 1969, by Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., who said he was "exceedingly troubled by the lack of any definitive information which would help resolve the question of whether there is a causal connection between televised crime and violence and antisocial behavior by individuals, especially children."

The committee said the question is a "very complex issue, for which there are no simple answers."

There is a need for more study in this area, the panel said. It followed orders to avoid a policy of recommendations, and said solutions would be difficult anyway.

"If broadcasters simply changed the quantity balance between violent and other kinds of shows, it is not clear what the net effect would be," the study said.

"People hunt and choose the kinds of stimulus material they want. Violent material is popular. If our society changed in no other way than changing the balance of television offerings, people, to some degree, would still seek out violent material.

"More drastic changes, such as general censorship, would clearly have wide effects, but of many kinds, and some of them distinctly undesirable."

Son Caught In Raid

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — "The greatest thing that happened to Bill was his getting busted. If he hadn't I'm sure he'd be dead now."

That was William S. Brandom Sr., speaking of his son, Bill Jr., and his arrest this summer in a series of drug raids in Clay and Platte Counties. It was not just another father speaking of his son being spared a worse fate by being arrested before the drug habit took his life.

Brandom says "it was undoubtedly the greatest shock of my entire life. I just couldn't believe it. We had the house staked out, knew who had come and gone, who the customers were and Bill had never been there before."

In the seven months that followed those raids, the younger Brandom has been in two hospitals, quit college, attempted suicide and spent two months in the Platte County jail.

Bill, 19, has served 42 days of a 90-day jail sentence and was released by Judge John Yeaman last week. He will serve the remainder of his sentence on weekends so he might have the chance to go to college again.

The Brandom youth says his arrest and conviction (he pleaded guilty Nov. 30 to a charge of possession of LSD) has hurt his family. It has also made him realize he could have died of repeated doses of cocaine and LSD. He said that since the fall of 1970 he had taken injections of cocaine and once, accidentally, a dose of heroin.

It was while he was at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, that Bill Jr., a former Eagle Scout and high school honor student, was introduced to drugs, he said.

"Everybody I knew there was using the stuff. Only two of the 24 people in my dormitory were straight."

He dropped out of Drake after one semester, returning home to William Jewell College where he quit after the arrest. Now he is going to a community college to repair the damage he believes he has caused himself and his family.

He was taken to a hospital for observation on the day of his arrest for what his parents were afraid was brain damage. The youth said he was "coming down" off the effect of 10 different drug pills, mostly LSD and MDS spiked with heroin, he had taken the night before.

"I was afraid to go out again and meet people," he said. "I was afraid to get into society again. And so I got a real strange idea and tried to slit my wrists. While I was cutting my wrists, two people came in and stopped me."

Brandom was then transferred to the psychiatric ward at Memorah Medical Center for three weeks.

About his father's comment that if he hadn't been busted he might be dead now, the son answere--"or worse."

"I've got a lot of mixed feelings about drugs. All drugs. The first thing they do is slow you down. Not just physically, they slow your whole life down. And you no longer function as you used to. You get a preoccupation with drugs — it was stored all the time. I never went a day without smoking marijuana twice on top of acid."

His astonished father asked him how he was able to keep a habit that extreme from his family.

"I can tell you exactly," Brandom Jr., replied. "In drug movies you see how bizarre drugs make people and you think to yourself--if I was to see someone like that I'd know he was messed up on drugs. But that isn't the way it is. There are times when I'd sit at the dinner table and there would be a lot of times we were together and I was on drugs."

The prosecutor said he could remember times when his son seemed very elated or very depressed.

"There would be times I'd yell about his hair or the hours he was keeping," Brandom Sr., said. "And for the next day he'd be depressed and I'd lay off him. Then he'd be jubilant over and under the "warp" or and I'd think, "Well, we're back in a good relationship.' I was so damned naive; it wasn't the relationship at all, it was the drugs.

"It was quite embarrassing— there's no doubt about that. After all the notoriety we did get, I got the feeling that it would be an objective lesson to a good many people, that this very same thing could happen in their own homes. And lo and behold this proved to be true because I had numerous calls from parents that had checked out their children and found out that their children were in fact on drugs."

Bank Bomber Remembered As Quiet, Nonviolent

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Old acquaintances recall Dr. Ronald Kaufman, named as the man who planted bombs in nine banks last summer, as a quiet, bright student who opposed violence as a way of solving problems such as civil rights and ending the war in Vietnam.

The FBI says the 33-year-old psychologist should be "considered armed and dangerous," but those who remember him here and in Chicago described him as gentle, thoughtful, nice, clean, quiet, sensitive, intelligent, intense and brilliant.

A nationwide hunt is under way for Kaufman, charged by the FBI with 12 counts in connection with bombs found in safe deposit boxes of three San Francisco banks. FBI spokesmen said Kaufman was identified through fingerprints found on components of bombs taken from nine banks in San Francisco, Chicago and New York. An official said further charges probably would be filed in the New York and Chicago incidents.

Notes directing police to the bombs said they were part of a new strategy to force changes in U.S. policies.

Bob Beyers, Stanford University information director who went to Mississippi in 1964 with Kaufman to do civil rights work, said: "He was quiet and soft-spoken and very bright."

"He wasn't the type to be out in front in any student demonstrations. He wasn't a student leader, and I don't think he had a very wide circle of friends."

Interview Order Is Now Lifted

NEW YORK (AP)—A judge Saturday lifted his order temporarily prohibiting the Ladies Home Journal from publishing what the author says were interviews with industrialist Howard Hughes.

"I'm satisfied that the stay granted by me represents unconstitutional prior restraint and that in the interests of justice I should vacate it, which I am hereby doing," said State Supreme Court Justice Samuel N. Gold.

"My adhering to prior restraint would work great mischief and harm," he said.

At an unusual Saturday hearing, a lawyer for the magazine said that 3.5 million copies, half the total circulation, were being distributed when Gold's order was served Frida.

He had acted on a suit by a Nevada firm, which claims exclusive rights to the life story of Hughes, the billionaire financier.

In an affidavit presented to the judge, publisher John Mack Carter of the Ladies Home Journal said that if publication were halted, "irreparable damage" would be caused. He said the magazine would lose more than $3 million in advertising revenue and $1.4 million in subscriber revenue, as well as loss of good will.

The magazine had distributed advance copies of the issue to several news organizations with a Tuesday morning release date.

Questions Considered By Judges

Was John Miller denied a jury trial unfairly?

Will the 37-year-old electronic technician be able to take his German shepherd riding again on a freeway on his motorcycle?

These questions now are under consideration by three judges in Superior Court.

It started June 26 on the San Bernardino Freeway when Miller was cited for carrying an unsafe load--the Baron. The dog wore a helmet and goggles, and was perched on the back once of Miller's motorcycle with his hind legs on the seat, front legs on his master's shoulders and tongue waving in the breeze.

Alhambra Municipal Judge Lothrop E. Smith convicted Miller on the traffic charge Aug. 23 and fined him $14 after denying a jury trial on grounds it involved an infraction and not a crime.

Appealing his case Thursday, Miller declared "the classification of a crime as an infraction is a recent invention of the legislature for the clearly stated purpose of denying trial by jury."

Besides, Miller argued, he didn't decide on Baron's riding style. Von Red Dog himself picked out the paws-up, taildown manner as the most comfortable position. Therefore, he contended, the dog did not constitute an unsafe load--and besides a jury should have determined the issue and not a judge alone.

School Girl's Drug Habit

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — A 16-year-old high school girl has told officers she has a $100a-week drug habit and supplies about 100 other users at the school.

The girl, who is being held as a juvenile, was arrested Thursday at Muskogee High School.

She was served with a search warrant for her school locker and officers said they confiscated several syringes and other equipment, along with some narcotics and marijuana.

Dist. Atty. Jim Conrad said the girl told him she has a large enough cache of narcotics to supply her own habit and furnish all the others for four months.

Her arrest was followed by a series of raids in which three men were arrested on several charges. The charges filed against the men were misdemeanors but Conrad sid he plans to file other charges.

Before You Buy

by Margaret Dana

How good are you at telling a real bargain from a phony one? It can make quite a difference in how far your money goes and what you get in return.

Take, for instance, the traditional January "white sale," which bring low prices due to the store's need to clear out its winter warm clothes, towels, table linens, etc. They always sound alluring, and can be a bonanza if you're in the market.

But keep in mind as you look over the advertisements, and then at the goods in the stores, that there is a definite difference between "irregulars" and "seconds."

The Federal Trade Commission has ruled that an "irregular" of sheets -- or anything, for that matter -- is a product that varies from the maker's standards and has been rejected by his inspection line. But its defects are smaller ones, is such as a measurement of size is that's slightly off, or printed patterns that don't quite match up. These defects do not damage the product.

"Seconds," on the other hand, can have and usually do have damaging defects. These may be cuts, tears or holes of some kind which affect the wear and durability of the textile. Prices for "seconds," down, almost to wholesale therefore, ought to be lower cost, even than for "irregulars."

A smart buyer will try not to buy either kind without being able to spread the merchandise out and inspect it. This may not be easy to do in the day of packaged and sealed goods.

A store should at least have a sample package opened so that you can look it over and perhaps get some idea of just what the defects are, or are likely to be.

One particular place trouble can begin, especially in bath towels, is a badly woven salvage edge. Even when a towel is wrapped in a plastic pakage, it may be possible for you to get a close look at a section of salvage. Bend it back and forth -- does the weaving seem tight all the way to the edge? If the crosswise threads do not extend all the way to the outside edge, going length - six threads, and returning across the towel in an unbroken loop, you're going to have a towel which will soon fray under use and laundering.

Buying pantyhose and stockings, or socks for men, is another spot where the matter of "irregulars" and "seconds" comes into the price -- and the bargain. Just remember that while "irregular" hosiery may have some crooked spots, or be skimped upon in the measurements, it is not supposed to have broken threads or actual holes.

"Seconds" may have and usually do have something damaged. So weigh carefully the different prices of regulars, irregulars and seconds to see where you really get the most WEAR for your money.

January and early-February sales also usually bring clearances of goods from a variety of other departments in a store. A clearance sale held in the store's need to clear out its winter warm clothes, towels, table linens, etc. They always sound alluring, and can be a bonanza if you're in the market.

In a reputable store the stocks offered in such a clearance are usually sound, being neither defective nor of inferior quality. Often the left-overs are the result of some wrong guesses by the store as to which colors, sizes or styles would be most in demand. If these leftovers fit you, or your purpose, they may offer a good bargain in warm clothing, etc. with small outlay.

Another kind of clearance sale which offers excellent bargains, if you are on the ball, is the preinventory sale. There clearly have wide effects, but is nothing phony about it, the store may cut the price far reason for such a sale. It is better fiscal bookkeeping for a store to try to move out items to a planned level, especially when counting them all for inventory. So before the counting starts, it makes sense to clear out excess merchandise. You won't be able to judge the "special purchases" from having seen them before, and knowing what their prices and values are in relation to the sale prices.

One reminder about bargain shopping for appliances: There are two kinds of defects which may lower their price outside of a change in models or the offer of floor samples.

One defect is scratches or dents that mar the appearance but not the performance. The other is an actual defect in a part which prevents the appliance from working. This can be a bargain.

BRUCE BIOSSAT

Japan Shies Away From Militarism

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

TOKYO (NEA)

The world's occasionally voiced fears that a new militarism might arise in Japan are well understood by the Japanese. But the weight of evidence against the prospect seems overwhelming.

When I talked with H. E. Naomi Nishimura, director general of the Self-Defense Agency, his convincing sensitivity to these fears was the dominant impression. The realistic Japanese are themselves never without memory of their old World War II image.

There is some feeling here that, even if trained manpower were needed to help an Asian neighbor in a natural disaster, no uniformed Japanese could be sent to foreign soil.

Moreover, the pacifism in this country is real, embracing all age segments. Japan's 270,000-man defense force is not admired here at home, and recruiting is difficult.

Popular anger lingered months after a Japanese fighter plane collided with a commercial aircraft, killing more than 160. A formation of fighters was supposed to do a "fly-by" over Tokyo during a recent defense force review. It was called off on account of "smog." In fact, the skies that day were brilliantly clear.

Nishimura offered new assurances that Japan's self-defense posture is to continue totally nonnuclear.

The country's ground force of 180,000 is frozen at that level. Expansion plans, intended to keep defense expenditures at roughly one per cent of the nation's Gross National Product, involve only the navy and the air force (fairly well-stabilized at around 1,000 planes).

Nishimura said in interview that there can be no early change in Japan's established reliance upon the U.S. nuclear umbrella and its Pacific forces stationed in Japan and Okinawa.

But this dependence, while accepted as necessary by countless practical-minded Japanese, is deeply resented by many. Few in this world like being on the receiving end in a big-protector relationship.

Then, of course, there are the radical students and politically-minded labor unions. The newest street-theater rioting and work stoppages show again how tough it is for Japan to approve the pact restoring its control over Okinawa but allowing us to keep bases there.

These resentments, with their obvious political impact, are used by the Japanese to justify saying "no" to American urgings that they take on a larger share of defense costs in the Western Pacific.

The radicals' anti-Americanism is old stuff, noisy but of little real concern in this capital. More worrisome is the growth of this feeling among others, especially since the "Nixon shocks" on economic policy and his planned 1972 visit to Peking.

What burns some influential Japanese is the sense of inequality which the President's surprises laid upon them. Said one official:

"Is he paying more attention to China than to us because Peking has the atomic bomb? We would not want to, but we could get the bomb very quickly if we so decided."

He is right. It could be developed here in less than two years.)

The emotional Japanese moved from the animosities of World War II into strong, trustful friendship with America. Nixon's moves cause some to suggest today that they have been in a position of "over-trust." The great bond has weakened, and could deteriorate further.

Yet most Japanese still like America and its people and feel their security and well-being linked with ours. Nearly bare of raw materials, they know the high vulnerability of their complex 1971 economy. Some offer that vulnerability as the firmest practical proof that they could not return to militaristic posture even if they wished to.

COSTLY EDUCATION By 1976, the entering freshman student can look forward to a four-year tab of $11,271 and resident who entered the University of Texas this fall can by 1980 that projected figure expect to pay approximately will have risen to $13,698, according to the office of Student Financial Aids. $8,827 for his four-year education, the school says

It's another pair of feet to shoe. Another body to clothe.

A whole other life to be provided for.

Frankly Speaking

By Thomas F. Eagleton

SECRECY IN GOVERNMENT WIDENS THE CREDIBILITY GAP

Secrecy in government is nothing new. There has always been the tendency of the bureaucrat to cover up his mistakes and there has always been a need to keep some few things truly secret for the sake of national security.

But in the last seven years have brought us far past normal government secrecy to a very significant new fact of national life: the credibility gap.

From a government "of the people, by the people, for the people," a government has evolved that is increasingly separate from the people, closed off behind a curtain of half-truth and secrecy and, sometimes, the outright lie. People are worried, and properly so, about the way they are being "handled" instead of informed, not just on the small issues but on the major events of our time.

Legislation Not Enough

It does not appear that excessive secrecy in government can be legislated away. Congress tried to "open" government to public scrutiny through the Freedom of Information Act in 1966. This legislation did not open wide every government file cabinet, nor was it intended to. But it did make disclosure the rule, at least in theory. The law provides for exceptions, of course – classified information, interagency memos, trade secrets, investigatory files for law enforcement cases and similar categories of data.

Unfortunately, while the letter of the law was changed in 1966, the spirit of the bureaucrat remains the same. His ingenuity in circumventing the Freedom of Information Act has been noteworthy – high fees for searching for and duplicating documents, long delays and a knack for losing things in the shuffle.

Some agencies fail to provide index files and master listings of their documents – and then accuse inquirers of fishing for information. Others comingle information accessible under the Freedom of Information Act with truly material falling among its exceptions – and then claim that the whole file is classified or that separating the data will be too time-consuming.

Vulnerable data is hidden in computers– and nobody seems to know the program for getting it out.

As for the exceptions, the established policy of the Executive branch has been to interpret them as broadly as possible. Given the already overbroad language of the exceptions in the statute, that covers a lot of ground.

Congress Can't Find Out

There is a certain irony in Congress legislating the free flow of information from the Executive to the people when Congress itself often cannot find out what is going on downtown. Senator Ervin is still trying to pry out of the Administration information about what is being collected in various government- held data banks.

Information about our involvement, military and otherwise, with other nations is notoriously incomplete and difficult to come by, even for use in closed sessions. Often Congress cannot even determine how, when, where, and even if the funds it appropriates for specific programs are being spent.

Hopefully, Congress will begin to fight back more forcefully in the coming months. Plainly, the Freedom of Information Act needs some patching up. More importantly, however, Congress is going to have to face up to the problem of how to change attitudes in the bureaucracy.

The Whole Truth

At the heart of the matter is accountability. We as citizens of a free nation cannot allow our government to operate in the shadows, keeping from our view everything except what they want us to know ... and what we find out despite them.

The press has the major responsibility in this area. It is to conduct through which information, if it flows at all, flows to the average citizen. It is critical to us all that the press digs as hard as it can to get as much information as possible and that it scrutinizes that information carefully to ensure that it is complete and truthful.

The press's job would be a lot easier ... and the country would be a lot better off ... if government leaders would recognize the one essential fact that, if acted upon, would make the credibility gap a thing of the past: It is not telling the public the whole truth that threatens the structure of our society, but the refusal to inform the public fully and the mistrust that secrecy breeds.

A SOURCE OF PRIDE

HOUSTON (AP) — A Wisconsin researcher says the role of the grandchild in our society is significant because the child is a source of pride and comfort to his grandparents.

POLLUTION TOLERANT

Grows almost anywhere is an accurate description of this plant — dwarf annual vinca. It thrives under adverse conditions that would make other plants give up the ghost.

Just because it looks like something from the tropics gardeners do not realize how utterly satisfactory dwarf vinca is to grow.

It thrives almost anywhere. It is tolerant of pollution so can be used close to the road.

It is capable of standing extreme heat, drought, and other adverse conditions.

And it has no insect pests or diseases that bother it.

Wouldn't you think that every gardener would be growing it?

You can plant dwarf vinca in sun or in semi-shade — it will produce its shiny, deep green foliage and profuse bloom in either location.

Flowers may be rose, light pink, pure white or white with red centers, called "eyes".

Plant the slow-growing seeds outdoors after soil has warmed or indoors for earlier bloom.

NEW PRESIDENT of Italy, Giovanni Leone emerged the victor after a 16-day balloting battle in parliament, longest in Italy's postwar Republican history. A Christian Democrat, Leone succeeds moderate socialist Giuseppe Saragat.

Washington Report by Senator Symington

MISSOURI SESQUICENTENNIAL HONORED IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, D.C. In honor of the 150th anniversary of Missouri's statehood, the Library of Congress here in Washington, D. C. has opened an exhibit as part of the state's sesquicentennial celebration.

The exhibit, which will be on display until September 4, consists of photographs, old maps, drawings, engravings, music, political cartoons, and rare books relating Missouri's history from its very beginning.

Among 150 items selected for the exhibit are historic documents as well -- the original enabling act, the Congressional resolution, and the Presidential proclamation admitting the new state. Also included is the first Constitution of the state of Missouri.

STATEHOOD. Formally proclaimed a state by President James Monroe on August 10, 1821, Missouri was the 2nd state west of the Mississippi and the 24th state to enter the Union.

The territory that is now Missouri had been under the domain of both the French and the Spanish , and was finally acquired by the United States through the Louisana Purchase in 1803.

Ste. Genevieve on the Mississippi River was founded in 1735 as the first permanent settlement in the state, and St. Louis, founded by fur trader Auguste Chouteau in 1764, was the birthplace of the new state, being the site of Missouri's first constitutional convention.

St. Charles became the first capital of the state in 1821. The permanent capital, in the "City of Jefferson" was established in 1826.

INDUSTRIES. Among Missouri's most successful industries in its early days were iron ore, lead, and fur trading.

The Kansas City stockyards, opened in 1871 primarily as a feed and resting place for cattle en route from Abilene to Chicago, quickly attracted large packing firms and became a major center for the meatpacking industry.

NATURE STRIKES. Also found at the exhibit are accounts of two great natural disasters in Missouri. An 1811 earthquake, one of the most destructive in history, struck New Madrid County and other areas of Southeast Missouri. The tremors from the earthquake continued for almost one year and extended as far as Charleston, South Carolina.

The St. Louis tornado in 1896 laid waste a 6 square mile area of the city, killing 140 persons, destroying more than 300 buildings, and causing damages estimated at $10 million.

MISSOURI'S PEOPLE. Portraits and histories of well-known personalities who played a prominent role in Missouri's early growth are also on display. Among them: Missouri's first United States Senator, Thomas Hart Benton, Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain), Joseph Pulitizer, and Daniel Boone, appointed by the Spanish as a justice of the peace for the district of Femme Osage when Missouri was part of the Louisiana Territory.

Joseph Charless, the first printer west of the Mississippi and founder of the state's first paper, the Missouri Gazette in St. Louis, 1808, is also included as is Carl Schurz, German born political reformer and journalist. Schurz campaigned for President Lincoln and fought in the Civil War battles of Bull Run, Chancellorsville, and Gettyburg, Later appointed by President Hayes as Secretary of the Interior, Schurz worked to develop a national park system and was a staunch supporter of civil service reform while serving as a member of the United States Senate.

Missourians visiting the nation's capital this year will find this exhibit most worthwhile in its presentation of a sampling of the rich historical heritage of our state.

Rep. Concerned Over Arrest

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. E.J. "Lucky" Cantrell, D-Overland, made little effort Friday to hide his depression over news of his son's arrest on burglary chrges in Wentzville earlier this week.

Cantrell, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and a candidate for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer, said he has hopes his son, Robert Steven Cantrell, 20, will be exonerated.

"He told us in a phone call yesterday that he had no part in it," Cantrell said of the burglary of a St. Charles County veterinary clinic.

He was driving the car, Cantrell quoted his son as saying, but an examination showed no evidence of drug usage on young Cantrell's part. Cantrell said he learned two of his son's companions had needle marks. Five young persons were reported in the group arrested.

A bottle of barbituates was found in the car and identified as the property of the clinic, Cantrell said, adding, "he'll have his day in court."

cantrell said his son had not lived in the family home for three years.

"We have tried to raise all our children to respect other people and respect the property of others," Cantrell said.

He indicated he and Mrs. Cantrell were making an effort to secure a bond so his son could be freed until the preliminary hearing Jan. 25.

Superman Adopted By Metropolis, Ill.

METROPOLIS, Ill. (AP) -- Superman, that fearless crusader for truth, justice and the American way, is being adopted by the citizens of Metropolis.

"This is not a sham or a joke," says Bob Westerfield, a Metropolis resident who first thought of using the Man of Steel to put Metropolis on the map. "We intend to treat Superman in the proper perspective."

Westerfield and the Metropolis Chamber of Commerce say they already have the backing of National Periodicals, Inc., which publishes Superman comic books.

"They've promised to send us the uniform George Reeves wore in the original television series," Westerfield, 43, said.

"We also plan to set up a committee to read and answer letters mailed to Superman in care of Metropolis."

The Superman known to generations of Americans came to a fictional city called Metropolis in a rocket, sent by his parents who died when the planet of Krypton blew up.

Raised as Clark Kent by a middle- class American couple, he went to work as a reporter on the Metropolis Daily Planet, shedding his mild-mannered cover when he was needed to fight crime.

The Illinois Metropolis, on the Ohio River, is hardly the place for a big-time crime fighter. The town's 7,000 citizens, however, are working on the image. One of the proposals would change the name of the Metropolis Daily News, a weekly newspaper, to the Metropolis Daily Planet.

"That tower is 200 feet high," Westerfield says. "You could see him from anywhere in Massac County."

Harold Mescher, president of the Chamber of Commerce, says that businesses, for a fee, will be able to buy certificates of membership in a Superman Club. By proclamation, visiting dignitaries also will be designated honorary Superman.

Money from the membership fees is earmarked for the city treasury.

Fine Levied For Sleeping In Box

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A young man who for the last nine months has slept in a box on the roof of a six-story building in downtown Boise has been fined $15 for lodging without permission.

The 24-year-old former Californian told Magistrate Edward A. Johnson he didn't want his boss to find out he slept on a roof because "he would think I was an oddball and fire me."

The judge said the defendant had a steady job, was cleanlooking and intelligent.

He said the young man told him he didn't like sleeping indoors. "He said the last time he slept indoors he caught a head cold." Temperatures have been below freezing most nights since November.

He said he slept in his clothes without the protection of blankets or a sleeping bag. Each morning he would clean up and shave at the Boise Rescue Mission.

After questioning the man at length in court, Judge Johnson fined him a minimum $15 Wednesday and suspended a two-day jail sentence.

"Here is a man who is a real island," the judge said. "But he seemed content as anyone his age. He doesn't appear to be an oddball at all."

Broomfield Files For Hull's Seat

Broomfield, 34, is serving his fourth term in the Missouri House.

He told newsmen he has traveled 6,000 miles in the 6th District of northwestern Missouri and feels his prospects "look very good" to win the nomination.

In his travels around the district, Broomfield said he found the more urban counties of Buchanan, Clay and Platte becoming increasingly congested.

"Urban blight scars St. Joseph and soon will come to Clay County," he said in his statement. "Pollution of our air is choking us. Our water resource is polluted to the point that it carries a foul odor.

"Population increases so rapidly that our schools cannot keep up and services are inadequate. Road and highway needs go without solution.

"While this happens in the urban areas, our rural areas are literally dying. Rural poverty has gone unnoticed, but it is just as bad as the poverty in the ghetto."

He mentioned other problems besetting the area but said improvements can be made.

"I believe that northwest Missouri can do better and I believe that America can do better," he said.

Broomfield's wife died in 1970 and he is rearing his two daughters — Andrea and Leah.

He is a graduate of William Jewell College at Liberty and now is engaged in the insurance business in Kansas City. Before serving in the legislature he was a teacher of American government and American history at North Kansas City High School.

Mother Files For Son's Seat In Legislature

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) -- Rep. Morris Westfall, R-Halfway, filed for re-election in the 133rd House District Thursday at 2:39 p.m. in the Secretary of State's office.

At 4:27 p.m. his mother, Mrs. R. E. "Johnny" Westfall filed for election in the same district. The secretary of state's staff said Mrs. Westfall did not give a reason why she filed against her son.

What's The Law
Litter Act Not Valid

THE CASE OF THE REVOLUTIONARY ORDINANCE
By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

A group of crime fighting city officials decided to clean up the streets first. Consequently, they flexed their muscles and enacted an antilittering ordinance. In effect, the ordinance prohibited the door-to-door distribution of any kind of literature without first obtaining permission from the property owner to make the drop. The idea, of course, was to prevent unwanted handbills, posters, circulars, booklets, etc. from being crinkled up and or, at least, tossed into the street.

Deeming the ordinance a curb on their activities, several protesters attacked the validity of the ordinance in court.

"It's stupid," they argued. "How are we supposed to obtain the consent of property owners? Unless they first read what we have to say, how are they expected to know whether or not they want our literature? Obviously, the ordinance violates freedom of speech."

"While a person may have a Constitutional right to speak," was the answer, "he doesn't have a Constitutional right to litter. Nor does he have the right to force his ideas upon anyone else. Consequently, the ordinance doesn't interfere with anybody's prerogatives and is perfectly valid."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you uphold the validity of the ordinance?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that Courts have long recognized that, in practice, house -to- house distribution of written material constitutes one of the principal means of implementing the First Admendment right of communication and it may not be prohibited. If the present ordinance had been in force in eighteenth century America, noted the judge, the colonies may well have preserved the cleanliness of their streets only at the price of stilling the dissident voices of such pamphleteers as Thomas Paine, Andrew Eliot and John Carmichael.

Book Review

THE BALKAN ASSIGNMENT. By Joe Poyer. Doubleday. $5.95.

Today the "adventure" novel, which has many fans, mixes mayhem and murder, a bit of suspense and a melange of incredible feats by the principal character. Poyer has entered the ranks of those who do the trick in this field.

The central figure is Chris Boyd, a former U.S. Air Force pilot who is trying to make a living with a little air freight line in Italy. One of his customers, a German named Klaus Maher, draws Chris into a scheme to salvage a million dollars worth of stolen gold bars that the Germans had stashed away in a mountain cave on an island off Yugoslavia, as World War II was nearing an end. Maher also has recruited a former Yugoslav partisan, Mikhail Kostlov, who knows how to get the gold out.

The idea is that Chris will fly the gold to a black market in the Far East, and the trio will split the proceeds. But it isn't that simple. Chris learns from a shadowy agent from Interpol that the gold is destined for a neo-Nazi underground — and will Chris help break up their pipeline? Double-cross? Triple-cross?

Cinderella Success

And it couldn't have happened to a nicer Cinderella!

She was an unknown housewife when she recorded "Harper Valley PTA."

Almost before she could bat a pretty eye-lash she was the toast of the musical world with the hit song of 1968 and one of the most phenomenal hits to ever come out of Nashville, Tennessee.

People everywhere were singing the song and they all wanted to see and hear Jeannie C. perform it.

Fame arrived overnight, but the preparation was slow. Jeannie C. Riley spent two years cutting demo records and working as a secretary in Nashville before "Harper Valley PTA" changed everything.

And before that she spent those teenage years in her home town of Anson, Texas listening, learning and singing.

There were no professional entertainers in her family, but "they all have musical talent." Jeannie said. "My mother used to sing and daddy worshipped Hank Snow. I have an uncle, Johnny Moore who in recent years has recorded for Hickory Records. So the interest in music was always there."

At age 16 Jeannie C. Riley suddenly began to sing. No lessons, no single person brought it about, and what she sang was country music.

"I love all kinds of music," she recalls, "but I felt closest to country music and I think that today the public likes me best when I am doing modern country."

Which brings up the Jeannie C. Riley image — mini skirts and a certain wordly sophistication that Jeannie says emphatically is not like the real girl at all.

"I want to change that image." she declared. "I want to build a more wholesome image. I'd like to wear a granny dress sometimes and I'd like to record sentimental ballads and convince people that I'm not like the heroine of 'Harper Valley PTA.'"

In May, 1971, Gene Scott, Jeannie's business manager, negotiated an agreement with Buddy Lee, president of Buddy Lee Attractions, Inc. of Nashville.

"This is a very important change for me," she said. "I think having an outstanding agent like Buddy Lee is one of the best things that could happen to me."

Jeannie admits that she is a perfectionist who has never been "completely satisfied with any single phase" of her career.

But wise observers say she has grown and improved steadily. She has a string of fine records to her credit, including: "There Never Was a Time." "Back Side of Dallas." "Things Go Better With Love." "The Girl Most Likely." "Country Girl," and "Oh Singer." which established her as one of the great, durable young stars of the 1970's.

One-Third Mo. Residents Not Getting Stamps

ST. LOUIS (AP) — More than a third of the residents of missouri who are eligible for food stamps and other government benefits are not receiving them because they don't know their rights, the President's Committee on Health Education was told Wednesday.

The statement came from Mrs. Daniel L. Schlafly, wife of the president of the St. Louis school board. She was among witnesses who testified during a daylong midwest hearing of the committee, which was told by the President to gather information on improving health education.

Ecologist Barry Commoner of Washington University said that privately financed groups concerned with providing better health systems are doing a better job of making the public aware of pollution hazards than is the federal government. He said the government should "shake loose" funds from its own agencies and give the money to non-government groups.

The hearing was the third of several being held around the nation. Information gathered will be presented at a national health education forum in New Orleans March 21-22.

SERIOUS CANDIDATE for the Democratic presidential nomination, New York Mayor John Lindsay puts his hopes to the voter test for the first time in the March 14 Florida primary.

Abzug Supporters Evicted From House

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 women were evicted from the House galleries Tuesday when they demonstrated in behalf of a move to censure President Nixon.

They stood and held up banners after Rep. Bella Abzug, DN.Y., made a speech explaining her resolution to censure the President for not fixing a specified date for withdrawal of troops from Indochina.

They applauded during Mrs. Abzug's speech and brief supporting remarks by Reps. William F. Ryan, D-N.Y.; Parren J. Mitchell, D-Md.; and Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y.

They were warned by Speaker Carl Albert that demonstrations from the galleries violate House rules.

Albert ordered the galleries in which the visitors were seated to be cleared when they continued and hoisted their signs.

After the demonstration, Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes, D-Fla., denounced the demonstrators and said their action "flaunts the tradition and dignity of the House and is an insult to the constitutional process."

Pep Pill Seizure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials announced today the seizure of one million amphetamine pills worth about $1.5 million which they said were exported to Mexico by a major American drug manufacturer, then smuggled into the United States illegally.

The Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs said the crackdown had cut off the major source of pep pills to 12 Southern states.

The investigation, called "Operation Blackjack" lasted 10 months and ended in the arrest of 80 persons, the BNDD said.

Daniel Traglina, BNDD's deputy director for operations, said an hour before a Washington news conference the Strasenburgh prescription products division of the Pennwalt Corp. was ordered to demonstrate why its license to export amphetamines should not be revoked.

BNDD agents described Strasenburg as the largest single exporter of amphetamines and the second-largest producer in the United States.

A decision on whether to seek criminal action against against Strasenburg officials still is pending, Traglina said.

Over the last 18 months, BNDD agents said, the firm shipped four-fifth of a ton of amphetamines to Mexico, most of which they assume was returned to illicit drug channels in the United States.

Distribution of the pep pills was made to illicit markets in New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Kentucky, Florida, Colorado, Mississippi and Arkansas, the bureau said.

Construction To Begin On Highway

Construction on Highway 25 from Dexter to White Oak, which will include widening, resurfacing and shouldering, will begin this spring, said William H. Shaw, District 10 Highway Engineer.

Shaw said the first project will include 16½ miles of the highway from Dexter south to the west junction of Route 62. The contract has been awarded to the Tri-State Asphalt Company of Alton, Ill., at a cost of about $1.4 million and will include widening surface to 24 feet, resurfacing and shouldering.

The southernmost project extends from junction Route 62, 12½ miles to near White Oak. The contract, in the amount of approximately $850,000, was awarded to the Missouri Petroleum Company of near St. Louis. It also consists of widening to 24 feet, resurfacing and shouldering.

Shaw said the construction will start in the spring as soon as weather permits. He said both companies will be stockpiling materials this winter and will begin when the weather breaks.

Shaw said his department has no positive control on the work but it is anticipated the work will be accomplished during the construction season.

A contract has also been awarded to the J. W. Githens Construction Company, Poplar Bluff, for the construction of two bridges and some resurfacing work on Highway 53 and Route J. The bridge construction is in connection with channel improvement work being accomplished by the Corps of Engineers.

The contractor plans to begin the bridge construction on Route J around February 1 and Route J will be closed to through traffic during the construction. Route J runs between Highways 53 and 25. Construction on Highway 53 will be done under traffic.

Dexter Man Sentenced For Three Years

BLOOMFIELD — Robert Terry Benefield, 26, of Dexter, was given two three- year sentences on charges of burglary and stealing to run concurrently in Stoddard County Circuit Court here Monday by Judge Wm. H. Billings.

The prisoner was being taken to the state penitentiary in Jefferson City today by Sheriff Edsel Edwards. Benefield had earlier entered a plea of innocent in Magistrate Court here, but changed his plea to guilty Monday.

He was arrested Oct. 27, 1971, and charged with breaking into a body shop in Dexter owned by Jerry Crowley and Jerry Croder on the previous night.

Offices Closed On Saturday

NEW MADRID — County clerk Jesse H. Wilkins announced New Madrid county offices will no longer be open on Saturday mornings by agreement of the county court.

The New Freight Cars: Only Name is the Same

Most of them look much like the cars people have seen moving along railroad tracks for half a century or more. There are boxcars and flatcars and tank cars and such.

But this is truly a case where appearances are deceiving. Even the cars that look so familiar are very different. And entirely new types of cars have joined them -- some covered with "snow," others that "breathe."

Each year an average of a billion dollars is spent on new freight cars. Railroads spend about two-thirds of this amount-- which accounts for about two- thirds of all railroad capital outlays. Private car lines and leasing companies, including railroad subsidiaries, invest the r st.

In addition, more than 80,000 cars are rebuilt.

Even so, the railroads concede -- in fact, they're telling everyone who will listen, including members of Congress -- that the pace of their investments in both equipment and plant must be stepped up, if the freight load of the future -- expected to double by 1985 – is to be efficiently handled.

The key to the future, the railroads emphasize, is in the hands of the federal government. And they are joined by the trucking industry and regulated water carriers in calling for regulatory and financial changes that will help make the necessary capital funds available.

But that's another story

BIGGEST DIFFERENCE: SIZE

The biggest difference between the old freight cars and the new ones being placed in service is size. Cars currently being retired have an average capacity of 61 tons. Those replacing them average 81 tons.

This increased capacity – coupled with changing traffic patterns that have produced longer hauls -- means that an average carloading today generates more than twice as many ton-miles of freight moved as did a carloading in the 1940s and three times as many as in the '30s.

In overall terms, the bigger cars mean that, although the number of freight cars in service has dropped slightly over the past 10 years, the total capacity of the fleet has been steadily increasing.

But size is only one of the ways in which the new freight cars are superior to their predecessors. They roll better, too, because of improved roller bearings and stabilized journal bearings. Ninety - seven percent of all new freight cars are equipment with roller bearings, and nearly 600,000 of all cars now in service are so equipped – more than fivetimes as many as in 1960.

As a result, there has been, since 1960, a nearly 90 percent reduction in the setting out of cars after the detection of overheated axle bearings -- in other words, "ho. boxes." Freight cars now travel an average of approximately 2 million miles between such incidents. If not undetected, hot boxes are a frequent cause of derailments.

Other improvements in general purpose freight cars include cushion - type underframes for a smoother ride, cargo securing devices for minimizing in- transit damage and wide door openings for mechanized loading and unloading.

STILL THE WORKHORSE

The general purpose freight car -- in its various forms -- is still the workhorse of the fleet. But, as early as 1870, when refrigerator cars were developed, railroaders were thinking about the specialized needs of certain shippers.

In the past decade, the drive to provide equipment tailor-made to the special requirements of shippers has accelerated.

Here are some examples:

*The "snowy" freight cars, which are actually covered hoppers. The snowed-on look comes from a two-inch exterior coating of foam insulation. Capable of carrying four times as much cargo as conventional refrigerator cars, the "snowy" hoppers eliminate crating, reduce in-transit damages and cut loading and unloading time.

* Aerated cars, which handle dry bulk materials ranging from white flour to carbon black. Pneumatic loading and unloading mechanisms "inhale" cargo at loading point, "exhale" at destination.

* Double- and triple - deck rack cars, which now haul an estimated 54 percent of the new automobiles and trucks produced annually -- more than a six- fold increase since 1959.

* Side - loading "all door" boxcars, which -- along with other huge- door types -- are proven cost- savers allowing improved mechanical handling of cargo.

* Specially designed cable reel cars, which handle the cable used for transmitting communications signals and supplying light, heat and power. The cars -- with capacities up to 180,000 pounds -- carry all sizes and weights of reels, sometimes with roll-on and roll-off loading.

There are, of course, other such innovative pieces of equipment -- and still more are in the planning stages. But the numbers and kinds of specialized railroad cars are not as important as the concept they represent -- a concept of customer - tailored service that makes rail transport feasible and profitable to a whole new sector of American business.

Academic Truths Bent, Twisted

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)

A few days ago a prestigious professor at one of this nation's most respected universities told me he had chosen early retirement. He could no longer endure the lowering of academic standards at the school he deeply loved. He had been there a quarter-century.

My friend had seen work by "honor" students whom he would have listed as failing or barely passing a few years back. He had seen fellow professors shrug their shoulders at sloppy workmanship in class and in reports.

All this hit home, because for a time in World War II I had seen this man in action. He had a genuine veneration for finding the truth, regardless of the consequences.

Later I was with a group questioning another professor of some international fame at this same university. The topic was why so many teachers have abandoned objectivity for activism. His answer was simple: "They want to be popular with their students."

Again, this reporter was at a number of sessions a few weeks back at which economic professors gave results of their current research. The reports and the question period following gave clear evidence that some of these social scientists had no knowledge of very important occurrences which bore heavily on their research. Some papers completely ignored known facts; questions from the audience gave evidence these scholars had not bothered to check out some of the most elementary data available.

In a number of sessions on environment, pollution and industrial accidents there was great emphasis on sensationalism. Questioning brought out that data was lacking for some of the more frightening predictions. Data was ignored which tended to prove the opposite of what the researchers were dramatizing.

All too frequently dire predictions were followed by pleas for more government and private funds to subsidize the research being done by the scientist speaking.

The suspicion grows that growing numbers of scientists are sensationalizing dangers to gain a name in their profession to win more funds to support their endeavors. Increasing evidence indicates some of our highly respected scientists do not hesitate to bend the truth if they believe the ends they seek justify the means.

Some time back this reporter sought out the views of well-known scientists on the ABM (antiballistic missile) dispute. I listened to several of these men talk publicly, then questioned them afterward in private on the statements they had made.

Out of the public gaze, when presented with data which contradicted their assertions, they admitted their statements were not true. In explanation, they implied that regardless of their accuracy or lack of it, their statements were for a good cause and served that cause.

These experiences are most disturbing. A democracy works only when we have access to the facts as nearly as men can discover them.

Directions of the Consumer

By RICHARD L. WORSNOP
Editorial Research Reports

(Editor's Note: Consumer Assembly '72, sponsored by the Consumer Federation of America, will open in Washington on Jan. 26.)

WASHINGTON – American consumers are on the march -- to several different drums and in many directions. Although every adult American buys goods and services, the consumer movement remains diffuse. Concerted action by private groups is difficult to achieve, and the fragmented and overlapping authority of government agencies can and does lead to buck- passing and inaction.

The 1970s, however, may bring a measure of unity to a movement that has virtually unlimited membership potential and hence should have the power to sweep all opposition aside. Ralph Nader is attempting to form an army of "public citizens" to safeguard the rights of consumers. In addition, the several Nader organizations and other consumer groups are pressing Congress to enact legislation setting up independent agencies in government to look after product safety and consumer protection.

Ironically, perhaps, the consumer movement has been fueled by rising affluence. Manufacturers contend that most products are safer and more reliable today than five or ten years ago. That may be so, but it is also true that the average consumer has many more possessions than formerly. Thus, the chances that something he owns will break down sometime during the year are correspondingly greater.

Consumerism has implications broader than those involved in the simple malfunction of appliances. Families with faulty TV sets, washiers, dryers, and air conditioners are likely to complain not only about the products themselves but also about the high cost -- and sometimes inferior performance -- of repair services. Moreover, the cost of maintaining appliances can lead to complaints about the cost of electrical or gas power. And the attempt of utility companies to meet rising energy demands often is accompanied by a public outcry against the air and water pollution produced by power plants and the scarring of countryside by pipelines or electrical transmission lines.

To the casual observer, it would appear that consumers have scored some notable victories in recent years. Congress has approved legislation on motor vehicle safety, pipeline safety, radiation control, and intrastate meat inspection, among other measures. Consumer leaders nevertheless remain dissatisfied. They complain that enforcement of such laws tends to be lax and that the government agencies charged with consumer protection generally do a poor job.

Still, consumer criticism of regulatory agencies has brought some remedial action, especially in the case of the much - maligned Federal Trade Commission. The first sign of a major change came June 9, 1970, when then- Chairman Caspar W. Weinberger announced that the FTC's six operating bureaus would be reduced to two and that more field offices would be established outside of Washington. The purpose of the reorganization, Weinberger said, was to speed the processing of complaints in the field without going through a bureaucratic maze. The FTC currently is engaged in a campaign to halt deceptive advertising.

Although heartened by the FTC's new display of muscle, consumer groups are preparing a major effort in this presidential election year to obtain legislation setting up a new regulatory approach. The idea is to consolidate most existing regulatory functions in a pair of new super- agencies -- one for product safety and one for consumer protection.

Some observers find it ironic that consumer groups, with their low opinion of existing regulatory agencies, should be calling for creation of two new, more powerful ones. Ralph Nader, among others, is aware of the pitfalls of relying exclusively on government for consumer protection.

In a four- page "Dear Friend" letter printed on recycled paper, Nader asserted that if a strong citizen movement had started 25 years ago, the nation's poverty and hunger would have been "discovered" long ago, cities would not be "choking with cars," consumers would not be "cheated by" planned product obsolescence, and water "would still be safe for swimming." In closing, Nader invited citizens to think what American life "will be like 20 years from now if we don't take action."

Dogs May Be Used To Combat Air Sabotage

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Federal Aviation Administration is having dogs trained to sniff out hidden explosives in an effort to thwart hijackers and saboteurs.

Fairfax County, Va., police are training the dogs under a $34,000 FAA contract.

If the program is successful, the FAA plans to use the animals at Washington's National and Dulles International airports.

FAA Administrator John N. Shaffer said, "Although the dogs involved in the test program are intended for use at the two FAA - operated airports only, the concept could be adopted by other airports as well, thus further increasing the odds against successful hijackings or acts of sabotage."

After a 20-week training course, the four German shepherds will be tested for 45 days at National Airport before a decision is made whether to permanently adopt the program.

In a preliminary test at Dulles a year ago, dogs were able to sniff out explosives on persons and in luggage or cargo.

Officials said the dogs should be especially useful in quick checking and clearing of airplanes grounded by a bomb threat or hoax.

Loophole Closing Savings Pegged At $166 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Taxable income would rise by $166 billion if all loopholes in present tax laws were eliminated, a congressional committee has been told.

Joseph A. Pechman and Benjamin A. Okner of the Brookings Institution, a private research organization, said Friday it is unnecessary to "go to the extreme" of adopting a value - added tax, essentially a federal sales tax, to raise sorely needed federal income.

General Revenue Tax

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's Budget Director and comptroller, John C. Vaughn, reports that the general revenue (tax) receipts of the state totaled $318,364,772 for the first six months of the 1971-72 fiscal year.

That compared with $251,084,704 for the first six months of the last fiscal year.

Missouri's best revenue producer, the sales-use tax, jumped from $147.5 million to $175.3 million in the comparative six month periods.

Income tax receipts rose from $71.9 million in the first six months of last fiscal year to $106.7 million for the comparable period this fiscal year. That reflects the income tax increase enacted by a special session of the legislature in December, 1969.

Vaughn said in the first six months of this year the state has collected 42 per cent of the anticipated revenue for the year. At the same point last fiscal year only 37 per cent of expected revenue had been collected. He said he wants to take a look at January's receipts before deciding whether to make in any change in his anticipated general revenue estimate of $750,700,000 for the full fiscal year.

? Consumer's Question Box ? By Margaret Dana

Q. In a recent column you said a polyurethane foam mattress was more fire resistant than latex foam. But I saw a TV special which said urethane foam creates a deadly smoke that can kill people even if they are not burned by the fire. If this is so please explain your statement about urethane being fire retardant.

A. The two things are different hazards. Urethane foam, which today is usually treated for fire, or flame resistance when used in bedding, does not catch fire as easily as untreated latex foam. But once on fire, urethane foam does indeed give off toxic smoke, as do many other plastic materials. Moreover, urethane foam, as I mentioned recently, has the capacity to burn without a flame touching it, under excessive heat, such as in an automatic dryer. This again is not related to its flame resistance.

Q. Recently our local electric power company had to turn off the power in our area for six hours. I avoided opening my freezer and refrigerator as much as possible, but wondered how long food would be safe under these conditions. Can you supply any facts?

A. The first and most important thing to do is what you did-- avoid opening your freezer and refrigerator. How long the food in the freezer will remain frozen depends on the amount of food in the freezer. A full freezer will stay cold many hours longer than one only a quarter full. A refrigerator will not remain cold as long.

If the food becomes warm, especially meat or poultry, discard it. If you can take it out while still cold, cook it immediately. This will give you a little more leeway in holding it, but not six hours in a warm room. Fresh vegetables in the refrigerator will of course keep that long. Cooked ones may turn, however.

The real test of safety is actually the temperature of the foods -- if still cold to the touch, they are probably safe. If warm, they are doubtful.

Q. You recently asked us to tell you what the word "washable" on a label means to us. To me it means it won't fade when washed, or shrink, or have threads break. Why not require manufacturers to also put on the label what the fabric is made of?

A. Let me ask you another question: Why do you wash anything – clothes, bedding, etc? I suggest we all wash things to get them clean. Isn't that what "washable" should mean first of all – that you can get a fabric clean by using the directions given for washing? But being "washable" does not always mean that on labels. This is why I suggest we need an official definition of it from the consumer's viewpoint. As to labeling to tell what a fabric is made of; such a law has been in effect for years. Every textile product is legally required to tell what fibers are in the fabric, and what percentage of each is present.

Q. Will you give us a list of different essential protein foods which we can include in a meal to give the same amount of protein in a serving?

A. Here is a list of such servings of different proteins which have different costs -- some much less than others for the same benefit:

½ cup cottage cheese, 3 ounces cheddar cheese, 2½ cups milk, 3 ounces cooked, lean meat, fish, poultry, or 3 medium eggs

Many vegetable proteins like dried beans, peas, cereals and breads also offer inexpensive proteins, but animal proteins, such as meat or cheese, supply important bodily needs.

Q. Will you please answer two questions which have been bugging me for a long time. Is it true that aluminum cookware affects the food value of foods cooked in it and actually poisons people eating them? And do Teflon linings of pans have a harmful effect on foods cooked in such pans?

A. I have checked the research done on these two questions by various independent groups in colleges and universities, as well as by the Federal government. The conclusion is that no harmful effect on foods is caused by either. A lot of material has been published accusing these materials of toxic effects, but this research has been proven both out of date and unscientific, and actually primarily used to promote competing products.

Q. I would like to know what are the actual differences in the various kinds of cheddar cheese in stores. Why does "sharp" cheese usually cost more than "mild" when it.s the same cheese?

A. The length of the "aging" period is what makes the difference in both flavor and cost. "Mild" cheese has been aged two to three months, and its flavor has developed only slightly. "Mellow-aged" cheddar has been cured four to seven months and has a much better developed flavor. "Sharp" cheese has been aged eight to 12 months, and so has the full, well- developed cheddar taste. The longer the cheese is held, the more it will cost. Since a "sharp" cheddar does not get onto the market as soon as "mild" cheese, it costs more.

(Margaret Dana welcomes opinions and questions on buying and will use them in her column as rapidly as research and space permit. Personal answers are impossible due to large volume of mail from readers. Address Margaret Dana Research Center, R.D. 3, Doylestown, Pa. 18901.)

NEW BEDDING for needy families in New Madrid County has been donated to the New Madrid area opportunity center of Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers employed at St. Jude Industrial Park near Marston.

Families Get New Bedding At New Madrid

NEW MADRID — Needy families in New Madrid county are receiving new bedding through the New Madrid area opportunity center of Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation donated by union members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers employed at St. Jude Industrial Park near here.

Center coordinator, Mrs. Bea Smith said new sheets, pillowcases, sheet blankets and bedspreads valued at $400 were being distributed.

During Christmas, Mrs. Smith said, the IBEW rented a truck to deliver from St. Louis a load of clothing, including over 100 pairs of new shoes, toys fruit and candy to the center of disadvantaged children, which was donated by civic organizations, churches and individuals.

Alaska is the only state in the Union bordering on two oceans — it is bounded on the north by the Arctic and the south by the Pacific.

New Director Plans Area Training Classes

KENNETT — Wilbur Thornton, Malden, newly appointed civil defense director of Dunklin County, said today he plans to set up civil defense training classes in each community and then unite the communities to establish an emergency operating plan for the county.

Thornton, appointed director by Dunklin County Presiding Judge Fred Neal, said "The concept of civil defense is relatively new and the disaster planning program for the county will be slow and take a lot of time. But over the next year, I hope everyone in the county will be informed on what action to take in case a disaster should occur.

"A disaster may result from enemy attack, sabotage or other hostile action, or from fire, flood, tornado, earthquake or other natural causes," he said.

The main purpose for disaster planning is to develop plans and programs within the county at all government levels to save lives, minimize damage, deal with immediate emergency conditions and restore facilities in the event of a disaster, natural or manmade.

"Most people in the county feel you run a bigger risk of being killed by a dinosaur that by a tornado," the director said. "I feel this philosophy has been brought on by the fact that in the country the past two years that we have never witnessed the disaster of a tornado or an earthquake or any major disaster. We have certainly been lucky. You don't wait until you have a fire to organize a fire department. You don't wait until you have a car wreck until you have car insurance. You plan ahead and prepare in case an accident should happen.

"Civil defense disaster planning works on the same idea— planning ahead and being prepared for disaster and being ready to help your friends and neighbors in an orderly manner should a disaster strike.

"Many people in Malden changed their philosophy toward tornadoes last spring when they got a front-row seat to a funnel stretched from a dark sky to the ground which finally dissolved into a cloud and spewed our city with rain and hail," he said.

"We were lucky and disaster plans which the local civil defense agency had worked on were tried out. Many things went wrong, but many things went right. The warning siren in Malden sounded, many people took cover and many people praised the efforst of the men in the Malden severe weather watch organization."

Since then Malden civil defense officials have worked on updating their weather watch and disaster plans and the last week of this month a team of men from the state disaster planning and operations office in Jefferson City will visit Malden to update the planning and operations even more.

"Many towns and communities have not been as lucky as Malden which receive; a second chance to plan and prepare for a disaster.

"I have always used Lubbock, Tex., as a prime example of planning ahead for disaster," Thornton said. In 1957, Lubbock received time to plan by not being hit by a tornado that dropped close to their city. City officials started working on emergency operatiing procedures they would follow to cope with a tornado disaster should one occur.

"Even though they planned and worked for 13 years, May 11, 1970, brought to Lubbock even a closer look at nature's most awesome killer. The tornado hit Lubbock with all its fury, did millions of dollars in damage, knocked out power lines, 30,000 phones and killed 26 people.

"Many more could have lost their lives, but because of the city officials' disaster planning, weather watch spotters reported that a funnel was headed for the area that was struck. City officials then, on a previously planned communications hook-up, broadcast to the people to take over.

"After the tornado had passed, city officials alerted the public of the devastated areas that would be sealed off, dispatched fire department, rescue teams,police and medical personnel, all working closely together in a well - organized manner. The city government worked like a well - oiled machine, instead of in chaos and panic," he said.

The plan had worked because city officials had planned to make it work and the officials knew what to do and how to do it.

"I do not tell the story of Lubbock as a scare story. But I think it is a look at reality and what can happen in our county or any community at any time.

"Just two weeks ago I viewed the damage left in the community of Scott City, a town just south of Cape Girardeau, and thought how fortunate they were in that only one person died as a result of the tornado," Thornton recalled.

"In figuring the wind drift of the cloud and wind that struck the city, that same area of the squall line passed over our county.

"There is never a guarantee that even though you plan for 20 years, that if a tornado or a major disaster strikes our county, that no one would be injured," he said. "Because no matter how many spotters you have, a funnel can drop out of a cloud in a second and disasters of all types can occur in moments.

"We can, however, work at informing the public on what major actions to take to prepare themselves to help save lives, minimize damage and cut the panic and chaos to a minimum.

"Let's suppose a tornado hits a community that has not planned for such a disaster. What do you see? Chaos, panic and no organization at all.

"On the other hand, a community with a plan will have an organized severe weather watch spotter program with volunteers already aware of the approaching squall line.

"The local civil defense director and the mayor will keep the public informed by radio. The people will have been informed as to the safest place to go in their homes.

"Rescue squads will be dispatched to the area. These men will have received training in first aid and proper removal of injured from houses and cars.

"I hope that over the next year we will be able to set up civil defense training classes in each community in the county and that each community, not just one or two, will help us in establishing an emergency operating plan.

"To make the plan work, it will take many volunteers who will take their time to enroll in the program. There are so many questions that will have to be answered which will take a lot of time. For instance, this question. What would school officials do if a funnel was headed toward a school full of children; Have they been informed as to what to do? How about our hospitals?

"In the course of this interview, I don't want to sound like the civil defense is going to run the county in times of emergency, but there are times when disaster and emergency occur when the professionals need help. I feel Dunklin County has been blessed with a group of the best state patrolmen in the state. I feel we have an outstanding sheriff's department. Our medical needs are the same as many in the nation — short, but we are thankful for the doctors we have.

"But in times of disaster, as I have mentioned before, the load can become too big for the professionals to handle and a helping hand from trained civilians can save lives.

"I hope in the next year we can put together an organized plan with all the CB'ers and ham operators in Dunklin County working together in an organized communications hookup.

Last month Malden held a business and industry civil defense conference. A meeting will be held in Kennett in the near future. The purpose of the meeting was to develop plans to cope with disaster, should it strike in their industry.

"To have an effective disaster plan for each community in Dunklin County, it would take a lot of effort on the part of a lot of individuals. Phil Shelton and Bill Wilburn of the Bootheel Economic and Development Council, have already put in a lot of work on this program. And I might add, out of the six counties in the commission, Stoddard County is the only county without a county director.

"I would like to say in closing, I for one, as a native of Dunklin County, would like to commend Judge Neal for caring enough about the citizens to establish an office of disaster planning.

"It shows to me he certainly cares what happens to the people in our county and wants each city of Dunklin County prepared and ready to meet the challenge should a disaster strike.

"Again I would like to say it would be a slow process in developing a plan in the county but in due time the disaster planning and operations office in Jefferson City will have to hand top honors for county disaster planning to Dunklin County."

Sky Marshals May Be Cut Despite Success

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Amid reports the sky- marshal program will be cut back in fiscal 1973, the Customs Bureau says the force is a powerful deterrent to hijackings, citing 539 arrests and the seizure of thousands of weapons in its first year of operation.

Customs Commissioner Myles J. Ambrose said Sunday that 20 arrests were made aboard aircraft during the year. He said that included seven arrests in response to hiiackings in which the hijacker made himself known and 13 others involving serious threats to flight safety.

The other 519 arrests were made during predeparture flight checks, Ambrose said. Sky marshals responded to more than 50 bomb threats, and seized or detained 36,459 potentially dangerous weapons, he said.

The sky-marshal program was started in late 1970 on a temporary basis after President Nixon responded to a wave of hijackings.

Coffee Corner by Cherie

I cannot for the life of me understand why these silly boys want to let their hair grow so long. Here I am sitting in the beauty parlour and going through all sorts of ridiculous dos so I'll come out with this fuzzy mess of mine looking half way decent for two or three days, and my hair isn't near as long as what some of these fellas are wearing now. Gee, I always thought there were two great things going for being male (1) you could ask out who you wanted to for a date, and (2) you didn't have to worry about your hair other than washing it and getting an occassional haircut! And just think — some guys are lucky enough to be bald and then no problem whatsoever — I knew the younger generation didn't have much cool and this just goes to prove it! Heavens, for generations Nature (and Mother Nature is always smarter than we puny humans), has been evolving people so they have smaller little fingers and toes and less and less hair and these silly kids, next thing you know they'll want a bone graft so all their fingers and toes will even out! I don't know, but to me to be able to sail down the street in an open convertible and let the wind blow in your face and have no hair worries would just be fantastic and these kids have just gone and blown a really great happening. Anyway, my main objection is that I still like to know if the object of my attention is male or female and who knows nowadays! I mean it gets pretty embarrassing when you can go up to a young lady and discreetly ask her the way to the nearest "powder room" and have her give you directions for the "gentlemen's" in bass — now just think about that (and be very, very careful who you approach for directions).

Coach Calls The President

ART BUCHWALD
in the
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON — In spite of all he has to do, President Nixon still takes time out of his busy day to telephone football coaches and offer them encouragement and advice.

While the President does this on the spur of the moment, it has never occurred to any football coach to telephone Mr. Nixon and offer him words of inspiration and solace.

"Hello, Mr. President, this is Coach Harold Elkins of the John V. Lindsay High School football team. I just wanted to call you and tell you to keep your chin up and don't get discouraged because you've lost a few lately."

"Thank you, Coach."

"The most important thing to remember is that when you're on the five- yard line and you're fumbling, the other guy still has to recover the ball."

"I never thought of that, Coach."

"Mr. President, my team has lost 39 out of its last 40 games, but I learned one thing. Never give up. You have to say to yourself, 'I may be losing the battle for inflation or the economy; or the fight with labor or with Congress,' or whatever you're losing at the moment, 'but I'm going to stick in there and give as good as I get, because I'm a pro.' "

"Those are inspiring words, Coach."

"Now, I want to tell you something, Mr. President, that you probably don't know about me. I always wanted to go into politics. But I wasn't light enough to make the team. I played some sandlot politics, and in my freshman year in college, I ran for a couple of offices, and so what I tell you now comes not from the heart, but from experience.

"Coach, I have to ring off now ..."

"I want to make one thing perfectly clear, Mr. President. You're going to goof between now and 1972— everyone goofs in politics, as in football, but the man who wins is the one who says, 'I've goofed, but I'm still in the ball game.' "

"Coach, I've got Chou Enlai on 'hold.' "

"No, I don't."

"It's team spirit. General Pershing once said that a team with a great morale is nothing if you don't have the spirit to go with it."

Local Man Hurt In Mishap

A Sikeston man was injured in a two-vehicle accident at highway 61 and Matthews junction at 2:16 p.m. yesterday.

William Allan McCann, 27, of Sikeston, was taken to Missouri Delta Community hospital in Sikeston suffering from facial cuts, and a possible concussion.

Police said that McCann, who was northbound on highway 61 in a 1964 Chevrolet Van Truck, struck a 1969 Chevrolet Van Truck driven by Paul Thomas Crews, 23, of Wickliff, Ky. Police said that Crews, who was eastbound, did not see the McCann vehicle and attempted to cross highway 61. His vehicle was struck in the side and overturned in a ditch. He was not injured.

Armed Robbery Charge Filed

CHARLESTON — A felony charge of armed robbery was filed today against Chester Gary, 21, of Charleston following his arrest Tuesday in circuit court where he was appearing on a charge of striking a police officer in performance of duty.

According to deputy sheriff Everett Holley, Gary had been sought since Friday night when Joe Nathan Craig reported to authorities he was robbed at knife point of a $1.25, a cigarette lighter and a pocket knife.

Gary was sentenced Tuesday to 30 days in the county jail by circuit judge Marshall Craig on a reduced charge of common assault.

Eddie Lee Butler, 22, Charleston was arrested Saturday night on the armed robbery charge. Both Butler and Gary are to appear for arraignment Thursday in magistrate court. Bond has been set at $10,000 each.

I-55 To Be Completed In 1973

Gary Chullino, engineer with the highway department, spoke to the Kiwanis club last night at the Ramada Inn about the upcoming projects of the highway department.

"Storm sewer work on Main street is about 70 per cent complete and by spring we should be ready for the widening," Chullino said.

Main street is being widened from highway 61 north to the intersection of I-55 and highway 60 south. "The work should be completed by the end of the year," Chullino reported.

"Twenty nine miles of interstate 55 near Perryville should be completed by August or September. Perryville is planning on a big celebration July 4 by inviting Nixon and other dignitaries to a ribbon cutting ceremony," Chillino told the club.

The final section of the I-55 project will start in two weeks. "With two good construction seasons I-55 should be completed in 1973" Chullinosaid.

The bridge over the Mississippi River at Cairo connecting I-57 and I-55 is four to five years away from completion," Chullino said.

Motions To Vacate Denied

The men were returned to state prison at Jefferson City to continue serving their sentences.

Watson is serving four yrars for burglary and larceny in the theft Nov. 1, 1970 of shotguns and rifles form J. C. Penney Store in Kingsway Plaza Shopping Center in Sikeston.

McCain is serving four years for burglary and larceny in the theft of $23 and a watch from Bud Montgomery's junk yard in Gideon, after his probation was revoked in July, 1971.

Judge William H. Billings, serving as special judge, Friday granted Sue A. Gardner a divorce from Clarence Dempsey Gardner and approved a property settlement.

Liberalized State Retirement

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A bill liberalizing the retirement system for both state employes and legislators reached the Missouri Senate today with the approval of its Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Maurice Schechter, DCreve Coeur, the sponsor, said it would give state workers more take home pay than if they got a 5 per cent salary increase.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes warned the legislators in his opening message the state could not afford both, and urged the lawmakers to choose one or the other.

Under the Schechter plan, developed by a joint House-Senate committee after a series of hearings, state workers would not have to contribute 4 per cent of their salaries toward their pensions, as they do now.

But the contribution of legislators would go up from 4 to 5 per cent.

The bill also includes provisions for up to $5,000 life insurance plus health and accident insurance, all at state cost.

The state cost for 10 months is estimated at $6.6 million and for the first full year at $8 million.

Arthur Hamm, president of Council 72 of the State, County and Municipal Employes Union, AFL-CIO, said his 7,000 members are overwhelmingly in favor of the bill and consider it fair.

Poison Plot Couldn't Work

CHICAGO (AP) -- An alleged plot to poison city water supplies was a "harebrained scheme" that could not have worked, says James J. Jardine, Chicago water and sewage commissioner.

Two men, both city college students, were charged Tuesday with conspiracy to commit murder by introducing typhoid germs into the Chicago's supply of drinking water.

Jardine said any attempt to poison the water supply was bound to fail. Chlorine added continuously to the one billion gallons of water pumped daily to Chicago would have destroyed the typhoid bacteria, he said. Security police also guard the two water filtration plants round the clock.

Held in Cook County jail today on $250,000 bond each were Steve Pera, 18, a former hospital worker from Evanston, Ill., and Allan Schwander, 19, of Chicago.

DWI Charge Has $100 Fine

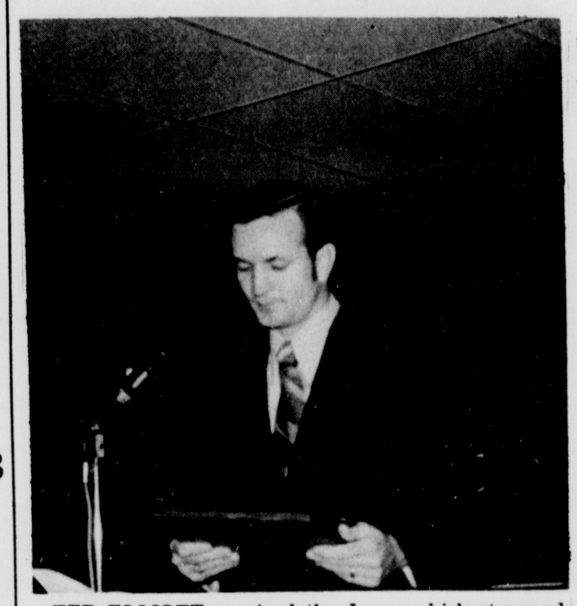
EAST PRAIRIE -- A charge of driving while intoxicated brought a $100 fine to Murrell Aydelott in city court this week.

Jimmy Dale Davis, 18, New Madrid and Donald C. Siple, 25, of Kingsport, Tenn. each forfeited $25 bond posted on careless and reckless driving charges. Harry L. Ishmael, 21, East Prairie Forfeited a $25 bond for careless and imprudent driving.

Judge J. Marvin Bryan levied fines of $20 each to Claud Phipps, Z. L. Jackman, and Gaines Eaves for public intoxication. Thomas Sterling paid a $20 fine for peace disturbance.

Ted Elliott, Jess Lacefield and Glenda Buchannan

Jaycee DSA Honorees



TED ELLIOTT received the Jaycees highest award last night when he was named the recipient of the Distinguished Service Award.

JESS LACEFIELD receives the Boss of the Year Award from Jaycee president, Don Newton.

Ted Elliott was the recipient of the Distinguished Service Award at the Annual Jaycee DSA and Boss of the Year Banquet held last night at the country club.

The Distinguished Service Award is the highest award given by the Jaycees and is given to a man between the ages of 21 and 35 for the most meritorius service to his family, community and country.

Also honored was Jess Lacefield, manager of the J. C. Penney Co., as the Boss of the Year.

This award is given to the Jaycee Boss who contributes the most toward helping the Jaycee projects and is most co-operative with his employees by allowing them to work on the Jaycee projects also.

Jim Hart, quarterback for the St. Louis Football Cardinals, was the guest speaker. Hart graduated from SIU in 1967 and has been playing for the Cardinals for six years.

"A lot goes on on the field that is not seen on television," Hart said. "Referees help keep the quarterback alive. They allow no unnecessary roughness, sometimes."

Talking about the past seasons games Hart said, "Things can't get any worse. We will not fumble or drop the ball as much in the next 10 years as we have in the past year."

"The whole team was set back by personal tragedies such as illness and death. Our thoughts couldn't be directed soley to football."

One of Harts pet peeves is for someone to say he throws a hard ball. "I do not throw a hard ball and when someone says I do I go and ask my receivers for reassurance."

When asked whether he had rather throw the ball when the receivers were covered man to man or in a zone defense Hart said, "I'd rather throw man to man because then you just have one man to worry about."

"The receivers are scared to go inside," Hart said, "and when they're not catching the ball you don't have the confidence to throw it."

Hart said in the last few weeks he had heard rumors that he had been traded all over the country.

"I would not like to be traded. I love the team and the coaching staff. I don't want to leave but am prepared to go if that's the case," he said.

Phantom Downs MIG 21

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Navy Phantom jet shot down a fast MIG21 in a blazing air duel of jet fighters today deep inside North Vietnam, the U.S. Command said.

It was the third encounter between MIGs and U.S. jets in the past five days of intensified aerial warfare. In the two previous engagements, MIGs and U.S. jets fired missiles at each other but missed.

MIGs have been trying to harass American planes striking at the Ho Chi Minh supply trail in Laos. U.S. air blows are designed to check the flow of supplies believed intended for a new enemy offensive in South Vietnam.

Previously, the MIGs had tried to avoid American planes. The last MIG shot down was on March 28, 1970.

Pass Unemployment Bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The key unemployment compensation bill to put Missouri in compliance with federal laws cleared the house today and headed for the desk of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

There was no discussion or argument as the bill was passed 150-0.

An emergency clause, to make it effective as soon as it is signed by the governor, cleared the house on a lopsided vote.

Hearnes asked for quick action on the bill in his message to the legislature at the start of the session. The measure could reach him by Thursday.

The feeling of haste was apparent in the House today as the Economics Committee asked permission to meet while the House acted on other legislation. Approval by that committee is necessary because a substantial expenditure of state money is involved in the bill.

Within minutes the committee came back with its approval and the House granted its consent to take the bill up at once.

Rep. Mark A. Youndahl, DSt. Joseph, said the bill does two things, extends coverage to employes of state hospitals and the University of Missouri and gives jobless workers who already have received the present 26 weeks of benefits, and additional 13 weeks of help.

But it also protects Missouri business and industry from having to pay a 2.7 per cent penalty tax.

Scientists Dismayed

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Some members of the space agency science team are dismayed that scientist-astronauts were limited to three of the nine crew berths for Skylab, an orbiting laboratory designed to study the earth with special sensors and the sun with telescopes.

The first three-man crew is scheduled to spend 28 days aboard the Skylab mission starting next May, and the second two crews are to be aboard 56 days each.

Two pilot-astronauts with little academic background and a physician-astronaut make up the first crew. Each of the remaining two has an astronaut with a doctorate in engineering and two pilot-astronauts.

"If this is a selection which doesn't try to get people of true scientific training on the mission, then we're in trouble," said one scientist who had contributed heavily to the Apollo moon-landing program.

The scientist, like five others who commented unfavorably about the selection, declined to give his name for print because of a close association with the space program.

A flight surgeon said more physicians should have been chosen. Much of the Skylab program is designed to learn about the effects of long-term space travel on the human body, he said, and subtle changes not obvious to the layman could be overlooked by an astronaut without medical training.

Soda Machine Attempt Made

An attempt to break into a soda machine was reported yesterday. Police said that Earl Stinett of Stinett and Barrows Service Station, 868 W. Malone Ave., reported the incident at 7:40 a.m. Tuesday.

Polic said that the machine was damaged, but nothing was taken.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Every man likes to have it said of him that he has an interesting personality.

* * *

THE WORLD IS GETTING YOUNGER

While most of us, with each passing day, are all too aware that we are getting older, the world about us — in average age — has been growing younger. And as this trend toward youthfulness continues, it is inevitable that we will see many residual changes.

Compared to, let us say, fifty years ago, young people today get a much earlier start in life. We have more youthful doctors, lawyers, businessmen and even younger millionaires. Today, ten years after starting married life together, it is not at all unusual for young couples to accumulate more than their parents managed in twenty or thirty years. Although the issue was hotly debated, no one was much surprised by the rapid adoption of the 26th Amendment to the Constitution which lowered the voting age in American from 21 to 18. Nor would it be very surprising if another Constitutional proposal, now being mulled in Congress, might lower the age to run for national elections — from 25 to 22 for the House, and from 30 to 27 for the Senate.

In our neighboring nation of Mexico, where seventy per cent of Mexico's 50 million people are under 30 and half of the total population is under 21 years of age, similar steps have already been taken to bring their political representation more in line with the youthful nature of the country's population. Upon the urging of President Luis Echeverria, and with the hearty endorsement of all four of Mexico's major political parties, reforms have been initiated to lower the minimum age for election to the House of Deputies from 25 to 21, and for election to the Senate from 35 to 30. And, since Mexico preceded the United States in lowering the voting age to 18 by almost two years, this latest action on their part may very well presage a similar move here in the United States.

Granted, as the Albuquerque Tribune editorially commented, "the electorate would have to be convinced that the 22-year-old aspirant to a House seat, or the 27-year-old aspirant to the Senate, was an exceptional young person indeed." But these are exceptional days, and we can anticipate all sorts of exceptional things to happen.

'INDIAN FRIENDS'

According to the Indianapolis Star, while India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was in the United States seeking support and aid for her country from the U. S., and while the Indian government is seeking to attract new U. S. investment in the country, the Indian government has acted to nationalize all American insurance companies by executive decree. Some 40 American insurance offices are affected. They do an annual business of about $2 million. And some people wonder why some of us oppose sending more American taxpayers' dollars to help our "Indian friends."

Now that the shooting has about stopped in an Indian military victory over Pakistan, India has suffered another type of defeat.

Its deliberately provocative attacks on its smaller and weaker neighbor have debunked for all time two great myths India has propagandized for years:

2. That it is a peace-loving and non-military nation that does not meddle in the affairs of other countries, and sternly disapproves of others doing so.

2. That it is firmly "neutralist" and "uncommitted" and righteously not beholden to either the East or West.

In the past 20 years, India has received more economic aid from the U. S. than any other country in the world – and shown the least appreciation for the $7 billion poured into India by Uncle Santa in Washington.

At the same time, while self-righteously proclaiming its "neutralism," India has been armed to the teeth by Russia. Hundreds of millions in late-model Soviet planes, guns and other military hardware have gone to India in recent years. Thousands of Indian pilots and other combat personnel have been trained in Russia.

So, in India, playing both sides to the middle -- billions in economic aid from the U.S. and billions in armaments from Russia -- is unctiously designated "neutralism."

This double-dealing drew scathing criticism from Sen. Vance Hartke (D.-Ind.), ranking member of the Finance Committee, when he learned Delhi was covertly sounding out members of Congress and others on taking expense-paid trips to view the "heart-rending" camps of East Bengal refugees. Purpose of these junkets was to promote hostile propaganda against Pakistan, and indirectly, the U. S. for shipping arms there.

Said Hartke: "We have spent billions to keep India's masses from starving, and the Soviet has sent huge sums to arm them. If that isn't breeding war, I don't know what it is. If the Kremlin can arm India, then I say it can also feed India. It's time our country took arealistic look at such glaring and expensive inconsistencies and act accordingly."

This is another reason why more Americans oppose continuing large-scale foreign giveaways -- in the guise of economic aid.

THERE COMES A TIME
WHEN STRENGTH IS MORE
CHARITABLE THAN CHARITY

If America's enemies are victorious, their first action would be to abolish charity. Harsh practicality, self-support-or-else, is all they respect or tolerate — as the pitiable souls of at least three former great nations know only too well.

America can be strong and safe, with no decent person going hungry. But to do so we must at once do without some of our unnecessary frills and costly bureaucracy, until America is strong enough once more (it is not, now) to protect and safeguard the producing men and women and industries on whom the future — the very lives — of the needy and all of us depend.

MAKING DO

While it may be true that "Heaven will protect the working girl," today's liberated career woman takes care of herself. Since she doesn't have much time to primp for an afterwork date — nor does her desk drawer hold all the equipment her bathroom shelf does — she learns to "make do" with what's available. The housewife can easily adapt some of these hints to make her at-home life easier: 1) Can't find your clothes brush? Wrap a length of Scotch double coated tape around your index finger for a quick lint remover. 2) This same tape will hold a finicky blouse-button closed. 3) Scotch book tape will mend a torn boot til you can get to the shoemaker.

FOR STUDENTS,
A CHOICE OF
'THING'

With the help of a $3.6-million grant from the U. S. Office of Education, Berkeley schools will conduct a 2½ -year experiment in offering 24 different educational "alternatives." By the time the program is in full swing next fall, about 5,000 of the city's 15,000 students "will be able to choose from an almost bewildering assortment of school options," says the publication.

If a student wants to attend a small, all-black school, for instance, he can go to Black House. If he wants a Chicano-oriented school, he can go to Casa de la Raza. If he prefers a multicultural approach, he can go to Franklin Multicultural. Or he may want to join On Target, a cooperative program between industry and school.

Other ideas to be tested include a school with student direction, a parent cooperative school, a neighborhood open school, a school-without - walls, a child development center, an off-campus school, bilingual classrooms, learning centers and "free" schools, whatever they are.

One school will explore three alternatives at each grade level, and students will be allowed to change from one type of school option to another any time they choose.

As for any students who don't want a black or white or Chicano or open or student- directed or "free" school, or maybe don't know what they want, or maybe are just looking for a basic, simple, nourishing educational diet instead of a "smorgasbord" — well, possibly a place can be found for them somewhere in the system.

ACTION SPEAKS
LOUDER THAN WORDS

Pollution of man's environment has in recent months become a major topic of national debate. Hopefully, this concern will not prove to be the kind of ephemeral fad to which modern nations seem peculiarly disposed. The problem of pollution will be resolved only through patient and steady effort and by the full cooperation of everyone concerned. Pollution is a national problem, not the exclusive problem of particular individuals or groups, Involved in the pollution question are national values, science and technology, politics, industry, economic preferences of consumers and geography.

That numerous factors contribute to the pollution problem has not prevented critics of private industry from exploiting present emotion on the subject. They have latched onto the issue for the purpose of discrediting industry as a whole. Their Holy War is premised on the untenable notion that businessmen alone have created the pollution problem. It is a narrow vision which sees private enterprise as a scapegoat.

The magnitude of the environmental pollution problem can be grasped by considering the sheer impact of the numbers of people and the unavoidable pollution that they create. Some 200 million tons of garbage are generated in private homes every year...one ton per person. Waste presently discharged into bodies of water exceeds five million tons a year. Columnist Ralph de Toledano states the problem succinctly: "...every American contributes his mite even as he drives down to the corner drugstore to buy medication for the ills of pollution."

Yes, there is a pollution problem. But, to indict private industry as the culprit is to grossly misstate the issue. Indications are that industry is doing something about pollution, while some of its critics, it seems, have not progressed beyond verbal abuse.

A NEW APPROACH

One of the highest unemployment rates in every part of the nation exists among Negro teen-agers. Because this is a serious problem contributing to racial tension, delinquency and crime in most of our large cities, the approach taken to solving it by a leading bank in Portland, Oregon, is of particular interest.

The bank gave a $10,000 grant to five Negro students from a major metropolitan high school The students were selected by the school administration. With virtually no strings attached, the grant was provided for the establishment of a corporation which would provide jobs for black youngsters of high school age. In the process, these young people would benefit from a real learning experience in the free enterprise system and in business management, which would in most cases not otherwise be available to them. The new enterprise, established as the Malcom X Corp., is now employing 22 black teen-agers and is successfully manufacturing and selling wood industrial pallets for loading and storage. The business will provide continuous jobs for a varying number of young Negro students, and profits will help finance college scholarships for others.

Certainly the action taken by this one bank represents an original and highly promising approach to solving a difficult national problen. It is an effort worthy of duplication by other firms in all parts of the United States.

THE YEAR THAT WAS

Nineteen seventy-one, the nation was assured by the President about this time 12 months ago, was going to be a good year and 1972 was going to be even better. All things are relative, as they say, so we suppose that 1971——a year in which unemployment averaged just a shade under 6 per cent and the rate of inflation was a shade under 5 per cent——was a good year by comparison with 1970.

Of course everyone remembers 1970. That was the year in which all the lines on all the graphs quit zig-zagging and simply zagged, thereby making it officially a year of recession. The first in a decade. So, by comparison, 1971 was a good year. Of course, the President didn't tell the country a year ago that he defined a good year as one in which unemployment was almost 6 per cent and the inflation rate was almost 5 per cent. He said, in fact, that the gross national product would rise by 11.6 per cent; it is expected to rise by 5.2 per cent. He predicted, too, that unemployment like the war, would wind down until by year's end, we had only a residual force of jobless amounting to 5 per cent, perhaps ever so slightly more; we ended the year with an unemployment rate of 6.1 per cent.

The 5,000,000 Americans who cannot find work may not think it reassuring that things were even worse in 1970, when inflation was eroding the value of their unemployment compensation payments even faster than in 1971. Indeed, they might well wonder how it was that the Nixon Administration could propose (and get from Congress) a 6-billion-dollar reduction in corporate income taxes in 1971, while being unable to afford welfare reform or revenue sharing and only reluctantly accepting a modest Government-sponsored program to create jobs.

At least half of the unemployment consists of teenagers who can't vote, blacks who are generally Democrats whether they have jobs or not, and women whose husbands have jobs and for whom unemployment is not, therefore, a calamity. So, perhaps, it is the kind of people who make up the unemployed that explains why the White House seems almost indifferent to their great numbers. And so, too, perhaps for the White House, if not for the nation's jobless, 1971 was a good year.——Post-Dispatch.

LUX ET VERITAS

Although violence in our nation's colleges and universities appears to have died down temporarily, the situation on the campuses is far from ideal. Students, teachers and guest speakers who stand for constructive values are often riduculed, prevented from speaking and threatened. College administrators have allowed this situation to develop and usually refuse to take any action to improve it.

On the campus of Yale University, a group of students decided to take some of the steps that the administration would not. These students, along with some alumni, have formed an association called Lux et Veritas, "light and truth," to help create an atmosphere conducive to scholarship rather than revolution.

The members drafted a statement of rights and responsibilities. They listed activities "improper in a university" which are "grounds for suspension and dismissal"; physical violence against others on the campus, violation of the right to speak and teach, and "obstruction of the normal functioning of the activities of the university."

These are minimal responsibilities which the administration should enforce automatically. Yet far leftists have so infiltrated higher education that it is now up to constructive students to spell out the conditions necessary for proper education to take place.

Constructive students on campuses throughout the nation should get together with each other and like-minded members of the faculty in order to proclaim their allegiance to sound values and their determination to resist the farleft ideology dominating higher education today. In this way they will be able to counteract much of the harm which higher education has done to our country, especially in the last few years. HLH.

NEW YORK (AP) — As every husband comes to realize, no man knows a woman until he marries her.

Even then, as the slow years mutter their way to eternity, he is never really certain he comprehends her nature fully. He is sure, however, of certain changes in her.

For example, when they first met she loved to go on long walks with him, and she'd halftrot at his side for miles without wearying. Today she couldn't even walk down the altar with him again without yelling for a taxi.

During their courtship, she ransacked the cookbooks to find new recipes to try on him, and he'd put on an apron and help do the dishes. But it has been years now since he has done anything in the kitchen, and he complains that her cuisine specialty is "four-day hash."

"You tell me who you want for president," she said in earlier years, "and I'll vote for him. I don't know anything about politics." What happened? Well, she thinks now that she knows everything about politics. Whoever her husband is for, she votes against—and insists on giving reasons.

He told her he didn't want any children for fear that having them might hurt her. She said that no, they must have two children—to ,be named Jack and Jill. She ended up having five children.

Marriage, she told him firmly before the ceremony, mustn't be the end of her career. She wanted to "be somebody" and make the most of her talents. Her talent, it turned out, was cheerleading. For the last 25 years she has been trying to pep talk him into working harder and making more money.

There was a time when she prided herself on washing her own tresses and making her own dresses. Now her annual bills for coiffure and clothes would pay for a paint job on the Statue of Liberty. But she still shows up for breakfast looking as if she had spent the night whirling around in a laundry machine.

Wasn't she gay and lovely, the day they came back from their honeymoon and raced up three flights of stairs to their 1½-room love nest in the slums? Oh, well, don't all such days pass? Now she mopes because the cathedral living room in their 10-room house in the suburbs looks so gauche.

Their quarrels once were as brief and impromptu as summer storms, he recalls wistfully, and were followed immediately by loving and laughing. But now, he feels, "she starts jabbing at me on Friday night and is still at it on Monday morning." They are weekend horrors.

She was so hopeful and cheerful as they took the first steps on their long path together. Now she has decided that her future has become her past.

Dumbly her husband wonders what he did wrong to make things turn out this way.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

This, at least, is the latest reckoning of Jimmy the Greek Snyder, the Las Vegas oddsmaker, whom we have signed up to give pollsters George Gallup and Lou Harris some competition in making presidential predictions.

The Greek now rates Muskie a 5-to-2 favorite to win the nomination, an improvement over the 5-to-3 odds by which Jimmy favored the Maine Democrat a month ago.

However, Jimmy considers President Nixon as 8-to-5 bet to beat Muskie. This is a slight improvement over the 7-to-5 odds last month. The President is also given an 11-to-5 advantage over Senator Ted Kennedy and a 3-to-1 wager over anyone else who might wind up with the Democratic nomination.

The Greek also has good news for Vice President Agnew. The latest soundings have convinced Jimmy that Agnew is now a 10-1 choice of renomination, a dramatic rise from his 2-to-1 rating a month ago.

BAFFLING BROOKINGS

Jimmy's political prognostications have baffled the scholars at Washington's prestigious Brookings Institution, who are employed to worry about the world's great problems, to explain the present and to divine the future. They reach their conclusions with the use of the computers, sophisticated data and sheer brainpower.

But the institution's staff met it's match on the day Jimmy the Greek came to call. Millions of ordinary Americans could have given odds on that. Jimmy is as much a part of American sports as the forward pass.

From his Las Vegas headquarters, Jimmy sets the point spreads on football games, makes the odds on championship fights and calls the winners in major political contests. He comes up with the right results often enough that many with a sporting urge wouldn't risk a nickel wager without consulting his predictions.

The scholars at Brookings invited him to come to their once-a-month informal gathering where they pick the brains of the mighty. He regaled them with anecdotes, beat beat their computer at football and blackjack and discussed his methods of reckoning.

Some of the thinkers were disappointed. "There was nothing deep," one complained. "He has a crude system. He even hires bartenders as pollsters."

Other Brookings staff members had warmer feelings. "He uses common sense," said one, with admiration.

NEVER WRONG

He began his political predictions in 1948, when he cleaned up on Harry Truman's victory over Thomas E. Dewey. Jimmy hasn't been wrong about a presidential election since.

The Greek's odds are based on delegate strength, financial backing, staff organization and poll ratings. He surveys political writers in all states, but keeps a particularly sharp eye on the bellwether states of Ohio and Illinois.

Here is a full listing of Jimmy's odds: (If the number listed first is larger, the candidate is an underdog. If the first number is smaller, the candidate is a favorite. Thus Muskie, 2-to-5, is favored while Humphrey, 4-to-1, is an underdog.

Who will be the Democratic Presidential Nominee? Sen. Ed Muskie, 2- to 5; Sen. Hubert Humphrey, 4 - to 1; Sen. Henry Jackson, 5 to 1; Sen. Ted Kennedy, 20 to 1; May. John Lindsay, 50 to 1: Gov. George Wallace, 50 to 1; Rep. Wilbur Mills 200 to 1; Eugene McCarthy, 200 to 1; Sen. Vance Hartke, 200 to 1; Mayor Sam Yorty, 500 to 1, Shirley Chisholm, 500 to 1; dark horse, 50 to 1.

Who will be the Democratic Vice Presidential nominee? Sen. Henry Jackson 2 to 1; Sen. Edward Kennedy, 3 to 1; Sen. Walter Mondale, 8 to 1; Sen. Birch Bayh, 8 to 1; Sen. George McGovern, 8 to 1; Rep. Wilbur Mills, 8 to 1; Mayor John Lindsay, 10 to 1; Sen. Harold Hughes, 20 to 1; Sen. Vance Hartke, 20 to 1; Sen. John Tunney, 10 to 1; Rep. Shirley Chisholm, 200 to 1; Mayor Sam Yorty, 200 to 1; Gov. George Wallace, 100 to 1.

Who will be the Republican Vice Presidential Nominee? Vice President Agnew, 1 to 10 ; Treasury Secretary John Connally, 10 to 1; drk horse, 20 to 1.

Who will win the election? President Nixon, 5 to 8 against Sen. Muskie; 5 to 11 over Sens. Humphrey of Jackson; 5 to 13 against Sen. Kennedy; 1 to 3 against anyone else.

We asked Jimmy why McGovern, an announced candidate who has stayed in the race two years, could be rated below Kennedy, who swears he is not a candidate.

"McGovern's no where in the polls," says Jimmy," and I can't find any delegate strength for him. He seems to take advantage of issues and gets good exposure. but none of it seems to make a dent."

So Jimmy gives New York Major John Lindsay and Alabama's Governor George Wallace as good as chance as McGovern to get the Democratic nomination.

Action Due Soon On Trade And Devaluation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration hopes to tie the knot on major new trade deals and send its dollar-devaluation bill to Congress by early February, a high Treasury official says.

The trade package and the dollar-devaluation measure go hand in hand, Paul Volcker, undersecretary for monetary affairs, told newsmen Tuesday. He said he sees no difficulties in trade negotiations.

"The trade package is going to be wrapped up, I feel quite sure," he said. "I think we can make it by that date (early February). I think it's in everybody's interest."

Volcker, an architect of President Nixon's international economic policy, held a rare on-the-record news conference, the first since he was instrumental in the international monetary settlement reached last Dec. 18.

He declined to be specific on negotiations with the nation's major trading partners. As part of the deal to devalue the dollar, the United States has insisted that Japan, Canada and the Common Market countries agree to some trading concessions.

Volcker said he sees no trouble with the dollar-devaluation bill, predicting that Congress "will deal with this legislation expeditiously." Technically, the dollar would be devalued by raising the price of gold from $35 to $38 an ounce. In foreign exchange markets, that amounts to a devaluation of 7.89 per cent.

On other topics, the undersecretary said:

— The Nixon administration will roll up a "very substantial deficit" in fiscal 1972, and the 1973 budget due to go to Congress next Monday will be deeply in the red. But Volcker said both deficits are justified under current slack economic conditions. Other sources said the budget deficit for fiscal 1972 may reach almost $40 billion, the biggest in 27 years.

—He does not expect the monetary agreement, in which a new system of currency exchange rates was immediately put into effect, will become unstuck.

—The impact of the agreement, which makes imports more expensive and U.S. exports to other countries cheaper, may be slow in coming where the big U.S. balance-oftrade deficit is concerned. The first impact on the trade balance may be adverse, he said, since the demand for higherpriced imports may continue at a high level through the early part of 1972.

—The big flow of dollars expected from Europe as a result of the monetary agreement has failed to materialize for two reasons. First, he said, U.S. interest rates are too low to draw foreign investors' cash; second, the dollar is at its ceiling in foreign exchange markets.

Volcker said he believes the new international monetary agreement will work well if "we do a good job at home" in pursuing effective economic policies.

The big economic bright spot last year was in housing.

The Commerce Department reported that the homebuilding pace set a record last year, with a total of 2,048,200 units beating by 7 per cent the previous mark set in 1950. In December, the homebuilding pace was even stronger, reaching a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2,517,000 units, another record.

Commerce officials said housing will continue to be strong this year, with lower interest rates and money available.

Bank Bomb Fugitive Indicted On 16 Counts

CHICAGO (AP) — Ronald Kaufman, an AWOL Army private who authorities say may have fled the country, has been indicted on 16 counts connected with the placing of bombs in three Chicago banks.

The indictment returned Tuesday by a federal grand jury charged that on or about July 16, 1971, Kaufman carried explosive devices into the banks and put them in safety deposit boxes.

It also charged that Kaufman used the U.S. mails to send letters to news media representatives detailing what the devices were and where they could be found. The letters were mailed on Jan. 5 and 6.

The FBI has said fingerprints on the letters showed that Kaufman had handled them.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson, who announced the indictment in Chicago, said the FBI has completed investigations into similar bombs found at three banks in New York and three in San Francisco. No indictments have been returned in these cases.

The Chicago indictment listed four aliases for Kaufman - Christopher Charles Mohr, Christopher Curtis Mohr, James Edward Jensen and Charles F. Owens.

The FBI said Kaufman, 33, enlisted in the Army last Aug. 10 under the Jensen name. He was scheduled to be shipped overseas with his unit Jan. 9 but never showed up.

Flu Epidemic Blamed For At Least 15 Deaths In Oklahoma

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oklahoma health officials, hoping school closings and warnings to the public would help break the fever of a raging flu epidemic, are sweating out the first confirmed report of a case of A-2, Hong Kong-68 flu this year in the state.

At least 15 deaths in Oklahoma have been attributed to the flu. By Tuesday night 30 of the state's 77 counties were at epidemic or near-epidemic stage and 23 schools had closed to hold the line on the virus' spread.

Dr. Stanley Ferguson, state epidemiologist, said the first case of Hong Kong flu was confirmed Tuesday in Grady County. Tests from patients in other portions of the state struck by influenza won't be ready for about another week.

The Hong Kong flu is extremely contagious and could be serious to persons with heart and lung ailments, he said.

"We do have a vaccine," said Dr. Ferguson, "but it is too late to do any good now." It would take weeks for the vaccine to become effective after innoculation.

The flu outbreak seems to be increasing, said Dr. Ferguson, but he added the illness is not usually serious among young, healthy persons.

"It doesn't look as if this is on the wane yet," he said. "In fact, in many areas it appears we haven't reached a peak."

Schools scattered across the state are empty today, and businesses in some areas have been reporting absentee rates of up to 20 per cent.

In Jackson County around Altus, hospitals were filled to capacity and the county schools reported 600 youngsters absent Monday. And in McIntosh County in the east-central section, Dr. Maurice Payne, county health director, labeled flu conditions as "severe," with hospitals operating at full capacity.

Some schools were closed in Muskogee County, and classes also were out at Garber in Garfield County, Ringwood in Major County, and Warner and Ft. Gibson in eastern Oklahoma.

Officials in some areas said a decision might be made today whether to close schools because of increasing absentee rates.

In Tulsa, school officials reported the student absentee rate was 12 per cent, four times as high as normal, and 232 teachers were out Tuesday. The officials said that, normally, 60 teachers are absent on any given day.

Florida Democrats To Have 10 Choices In March 14 Primary

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Florida Democrats will have 10 candidates to choose from when they go to the polls March 14 to name their preference for the party's presidential nomination.

The state candidates selection board kept Gov. George Wallace of Alabama on the ballot despite "grave reservations" expressed by the state party chairman, retained Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles against the candidate's wishes and rejected Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas.

State Democratic Chairman Jon Moyle said he assumed Wallace would participate "in good faith and not play games with Florida Democrats."

Despite his personal reservations, Moyle said, he assumed Wallace delegates would pledge not to oppose the nominee of the National Democratic Convention. The loyalty oath apparently would prevent Wallace from naming American Independent party regulars as Florida delegates to the national convention.

Yorty, who is campaigning in the New Hampshire primary, asked that his name be removed from the Florida ballot, but Democrats on the committee voted 2 to 1 that he is a presidential contender and therefore should be listed.

Moyle insisted that Mills is not a candidate and therefore should not have his name on the primary list, although he often has been mentioned as a possible contender.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, who signed an affidavit saying he is not a candidate, also had his name removed.

Those whose names were placed on the Democratic ballot are: Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, Sens. Vance Hartke of Indiana, Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Henry M. Jackson of Washington, Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, Sens. George McGovern of South Dakota and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, Wallace and Yorty.

On the Republican ballot are President Nixon and Reps. John M. Ashbrook of Ohio and Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California.

Kennedy, who delivered a broad attack against Nixon administration policies Monday, was rebuked Tuesday by three top Republicans.

Kennedy said tens of thousands of people will die in Indochina this year because "President Nixon will not allow the Saigon government to falter until he is secure at home for another term of office."

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said the Massachusetts Democrat owed Nixon an apology for his "intemperate and immature statements."

Replying to a Kennedy remark that the Nixon administration doesn't trust the American people, House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan said:

"Of all issues which the junior senator from Massachusetts might raise among the American people, the question of trust seems least likely to serve his interests." Kennedy is his state's senior senator.

Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, the Republican national chairman, called Kennedy's speech "the usual cacaphony of mindless negativism" and his criticisms "simply untrue."

In other political developments Tuesday, Muskie told about 1,000 people at a Kenosha, Wis., political rally that Nixon's 1968 campaign slogan "'Bring us together' was a promise whose implications I don't believe he fully understands."

Discarding his prepared text criticizing the President's economic policies, the Maine Democrat said administration policies have inspired division, mistrust and discrimination.

Muskie drew his loudest applause when he said he hopes Nixon can remove the Vietnam issue from the campaign by withdrawing all U.S. troops from Indochina.

"I don't want the issue," he said. "I want our men back."

But McGovern said in New Hampshire the war will remain an issue regardless of Nixon's troop withdrawal program because the President "could have stopped the war in 1969."

Chairman Charles Briody of the People's party, which currently is pushing Dr. Benjamin Spock for president, said he and former Sen. Eugene McCarthy had agreed "that if Humphrey or Muskie or Jackson was the Democratic candidate the only way that Nixon can be defeated would be to form a fourth party ...."

Briody, who met with McCarthy in Washington, said the fourth party effort would be designed to deny any candidate an electoral-vote majority and throw the election into the House of Representatives, which is controlled by Democrats and could be expected to choose a Democratic president.

Briody said McCarthy indicated he would support a fourth party even if he weren't that party's presidential candidate.

McCloskey, who challenged the President primarily because of their differences on Indochina policies, predicted that lagging support for Nixon in New Hampshire would force him to campaign in the state's March 7 primary despite his announced intention not to do so.

Jackson's campaign headquarters announced the Washington senator will visit seven states in the next eight weeks.

TUSCUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — With a 30 per cent absentee rate among pupils because of influenza, Tuscumbia schools closed Tuesday for the rest of the week.

C. H. Stringer, superintendent, said "there is too much sickness" and "it seems like it's growing bigger." Several teachers also were out because of illness.

Schools are scheduled to reopen Monday.

Old Furniture Collecting Started Early In Marriage

MRS. LEWEY HEATH in the living room of her home that is filled with turn of the century furniture. The tables are of walnut and have marble tops. The lamp is a temp-Dematio made in Italy.

Mrs. Lewey Heath, route one, East Prairie, has a genuine love for antiques. Her home is filled with furniture that she began collecting early in her married life.

"I wouldn't know what to do if I went into a furniture store to buy furniture" she said.

"I've bought my furniture in junk shops, from other people and at rummage sales."

"I go to places other people wouldn't even think of going," she laughed. "Rummage sales are really great places to go because you find people selling cut glass, sometimes flat ware and silver and linens.

"My attic is full of bargains I have picked up over the years, but the one thing you don't want to do is buy a piece of furniture that is junk. Check to see if it is solid wood and not broken or cracked," she added. "Much of the furniture made during the war and the depression years was made of veneered wood and is just not the quality of earlier years."

Looking through Mrs. Heath's house one can tell she has always bought good furniture. She has several solid and walnut tables topped with marble. The coffee table in her living room and two end tables are marble-topped solid walnut with ornate legs.

Her couch is Victorian, stuffed and upholstered in a light green damask material. She is not sure how old the lamps in the living room are, but they are temp-Dematio, made in Italy, and blend well with the rest of the decor.

The living room also contains her newest piece of furniture, a desk she ordered 35 or 40 years ago from Bennett Brothers.

"A dealer recently offered me $950 for my dining room table but I just couldn't sell it. My husband thought I was crazy for refusing," she said.

The dining room chairs are walnut and have grape carvings. Mrs. Heath did the needlepoint on the chair seats covers.

She has a fondness for the grape pattern which can be found on furniture and other pieces throughout the house.

The bedrooms house huge, well- preserved old fashioned bedroom suites with hand crocheted coverlets on the beds. The coverlets are rummage sale finds.

"I was never the type of person to dig into our savings when I wanted something or to ask my husband for it. I would always find a way to earn the necessary money myself. I sold vacuum cleaners, Stanley products and had a flower shop in East Prairie until about eight years ago," she related.

She has a silver coffee server dated March 26, 1872.

The kitchen is more like a "keeping room", such as families used to have. The fireplace gives it a warm, cozy, comfortable atmosphere. The cooking stove is fashioned after the old iron cookstoves our great grandmothers used. It is electric but has a warming oven similar to original iron cookstoves.

Mr. and Mrs. Heath built their home in 1940 after they had been married for eight years. The original house had four rooms without running water. They later remodeled and it now has a living room, dining room, kitchen- family room combination, two bedrooms, two and one half baths, a utility room and double car garage with a brick floor.

Her dream is to have her own antique shop.

"I would love to have a building where I could display all of my finds. I would like to have it behind the house, and people could call me or make appointments, but my husband says if you are going to have a business you should stick with it. I like to go too much to be tied down all the time," she laughed.

Mrs. Heath enjoys people and showing her house and recently let the Women's Civic Club of Sikeston tour her home.

Ann Landers

Pediatrician Has The Right Answer

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to say a word or two to the girl whose boyfriend laid a sloppy, wet goodnight kiss on her and who signed herself "Turned Off." Maybe this letter will help her as well as other young girls to understand a few things better.

When I was 16 I was terribly shy but more of a man, physically, than a boy. I was really nutty over a certain chick and I had been dying to kiss her for three months before I finally got up the courage to try. It was a beautiful moonlit night and I was driving her home from a great party. When I took her to the door she lingered awhile making small talk. I finally said "goodnight," and she turned her face up and closed her eyes. I read this as an invitation I'd been waiting for. When I bent down for my very first romantic kiss, my nose hit hers, my front tooth bumped her lip, and I bit her.

Thank the good Lord she had a wonderful sense of humor. She also knew I was humiliated. Bless her understanding heart, she started to laugh, and so did I. At that moment I was so grateful for her compassion that she endeared herself to me forever. Eight years later I married that doll.

When I read the letter in your column from the girl who complained because the guy's first kiss was like amateur night, I knew I had to write in defense of every scared, awkward Romeo in the world. P. S. The chick and I both send our love. --- St. Louis

Dear S. L.: What a heart warmer! And now, if anyone else has a first kiss story with a moral, let's have it.

* * *

Dear Ann Landers: After reading the letter from Relaxed Ma in Sherman, Texas, I decided to write my first letter to Ann Landers.

I also had a feeding problem with my baby. It was something new because my other kids were good eaters. I was afraid this child had a serious stomach disorder because he wouldn't eat a thing.

When he was seven months old I took him to the pediatrician. He agreed the boy was starving to death and asked the ages of my other children. I told him 6, 4, 3, and 2, and he replied, "I'm not surprised." Then he went on to explain that this child was starving for affection. He suggested that I keep the baby close to my body all day long. I thought this was insane but he explained that I should strap the child to my back so he could feel the closeness of me.

I decided I had better listen to him, so I made an Indian papoose bag out of gingham yard goods. I carried that child on my back from morning til night. He was on my back when I did the cooking, when I ran after the other four, when I did the cleaning and the marketing and when I hung out the clothes. By the time he was nine months old he was handing me the clothes pins, one by one. The neighbors thought it was a scream. But the child started eating, so I didn't care what the neighbors thought.

The boy is three years old now and he is my healthiest and happiest child. What he needed was love. My doctor knew what he was talking about. If it hadn't been for him that boy would not be alive today. Please print my letter. It might help someone else. --- Eleven Steps in Virginia

Dear Eleven: Your doctor sounds like a honey. Please tell him I said so. He's my kind of pediatrician.

Artists Execute Designs In Needlepoint For Chairs

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Nantucket . . . The hostess with the mostes' in the future may need to compete with crafts and furnishings that can be displayed in an art gallery. One well-known hostess here, Mimsi Harbach, has just had eight of her dining room chairs with their unique needlepoint seats which were designed by artists, displayed at the Lobster Pot Gallery.

It all began when Mimsi, who is Mrs. Robert Harbach — he is the son of Otto Harbach of "No No Nanette" fame — had thought of covering her dining chairs with needlepoint designs painted by some of the Island's well-known artists to get a true flavor of the surroundings.

Commissioning the artists was one thing, but getting the designs adapted to needlepoint was quite another, she explains.

"It's the tricky part of such a project," comments J. Floyd Smith, president of the Nantucket Needleworks, who adapted the needle point to canvas. "Limitations imposed by canvas makes flowing curves very difficult, and color definition that may look great on paper can be flat and uninteresting to canvas. In this instance the artists were sympathetic and willing to adjust their designs to the necessary disciplines imposed by the medium."

The designs chosen by the artists and approved by Mrs. Harbach were in keeping with the family and the surroundings. Virginia Greenleaf Koch designed a leafy bouquet with a favorite musical design motif of the family, the opening notes of "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," the famous Otto Harbach lyric of the 20s.

Maggie Meredith, well-known for her cat paintings, did one of her female cats in a droopy flower-garlanded hat with the usual "love" inscription. There are love apples by Robert Reimer and a bright poppies floral by well-known Andrew Shunney. A foggy Nantucket harbor was painted by Gerald Taber.

The eight designs are just a beginning, says Mrs. Harbach. She has ten more to go to complete the eighteen needed for the several dining rooms in her large house on Main Street where the family chooses to eat indoors much of the time when they are entertaining during the five months they spend at the house.

"The house is full of needlepoint, much of it done by my husband's mother," the popular blonde hostess explains. "Nantucket has meant so much to our family that I wanted something permanent to pass on to them as a symbol of our time."

PHONE BOOK ODDITY

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — There was something missing in about 50 copies of the 1971 Albuquerque metropolitan telephone directory. The alphabetical list of subscribers in the copies went only as far as the Smiths. About 63 white page listings were missing.

A Mountain Bell spokesman said the abbreviated book was caused by a mechanical failure at the printing shop.

He said about 50 books were published before the error was noticed.

HEARTLESS THIEVES

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — Police said burglars broke into the Bruce Campbell home recently and took jewelry, cash, clothing and appliances valued at more than $1,500.

Soldier Advertises Love For Wife

KANSAS CITY (AP) — William A. McNab's wife thinks he is the kind of man who "goes overboard" with gifts and poetry to her, so she wasn't surprised at the two-paragraph advertisement in the Kansas City Star.

"My darling Vicky. Though I am thousands of miles away on this very special day, I want you to know you are in my thoughts and in my heart in a very special way," it began.

McNab, who is in the Army in Vietnam, wished his wife a happy third wedding anniversary Monday, thanked her for being a loving wife and praised her for "giving me a beautiful purpose in living."

Mrs. McNab, 22, said "He wrote me a letter telling me to make sure I read the paper on our anniversary so I imagined there would be something in there for me."

She said her husband write's poetry frequently. "About once a month I can expect a letter that's just a poem," she said.

The McNabs met while both were stationed at Ft. Meade, Md. Mrs. McNab served about a year in the Women's Army Corps.

They became engaged after a brief courtship but she broke the engagement and moved to Kansas City with her mother. McNab followed to change her mind and it took about two months to do so.

Mrs. McNab and the couple's two sons, Matthew Guy and Robert Cyril, now are with her mother, Mrs. Shirley Cumberland.

What about the advertisement?

"I really think it's kind of beautiful," Mrs. McNab said, "that a man who's supposed to hide his feelings can love somebody enough that he doesn't care if the whole world knows it.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Mending Those Holes In Drapery Backings

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Kathy H. wants to patch the holes in the thermal backing on her draperies, so I suggest cutting tiny pieces of adhesive tape to fit in the holes. Since this tape is waterproof it might not have to be replaced after each washing.—MRS. L. R.

DEAR POLLY—After reading Kathy H's problem with holes in the thermal (rubberlike) backing to her draperies, I want to tell her and the other girls how I clean my foam-backed draperies. Dampen a towel and place towel and draperies in your dryer, set on "Air" or "Fluff" cycle. They come out looking like new and can be hung immediately. If all draperies cannot be done at one time, be sure to use a clean towel with each new load—S. M.

DEAR GIRLS — Readymade thermal-lined draperies may be marked "Hand Washable," "Machine Washable" or "Dry Clean," so be sure to check on which kind you have. It is wise to always save such labels to avoid disaster.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I use salad or weiner tongs when stuffing toys, animals, dolls and small pillows with shredded foam.

When my daughter's identical twins were babies, she marked the toe nails of one with a bit of red nail polish so she could identify them. (POLLY'S NOTE — My twins wore silver bracelets with their names on them until they could talk. Such bracelets are great gifts to give twin babies.)

When I want to rip a seam, I place part of the material under the foot of my sewing machine, put the foot down, then hold the other part while I cut the stitching with a sharp razor blade.—FLORENCE

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I am ready to apply for a nice soft bed in a rest home. I have just finished sorting 64 socks for my husband and three sons who all wear dark colors, mostly navy but there are so many shades of navy. No wonder sorting socks heads my list of housekeeping dislikes. I have tried marking each person's with a different color of thread but this is time-consuming for so many and the thread comes out after a few washings. It is too cold here to go barefooted. I do hope some reader has a solution to my problem. Thanks and do sock it to me.—MARIAN

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is with flour sacks. Why can't flour be bagged in a way that would eliminate all that mess and powder that settles on everything around when it is being emptied into a canister. Just getting a bag open is a chore I hate.—MRS. L. S.

Defense Sparks Lilbourn

LILBOURN — Defense, spearheaded by guards Pat McClarty and Grant Dambach, sparked the Daily Standard's seventh ranked Lilbourn Panthers to an 80-75 upset of fourthrated Charleston Tuesday night.

Coach Larry Warren got some big defensive plays from his starting guards, who drew eight charging fouls between them, and used an inspired rebounding force led by Billy Wheeler to avenge an earlier loss the LHS cagers suffered in the title game of the Cape Girardeau tournament.

Offensively the Panthers were more balanced than the visiting Bluejays. LHS placed five players in double figures while Charleston had four hit in twin figures.

Lilbourn jumped out to a seven point lead in the first quarter after holding as much as a 11-point advantage midway in the period. Charleston battled back behind the sharp shooting of Alvin Pierce in the second quarter to close within two points and then went ahead in the third by three, 60-57, before the Panther defense went to work and checked the CHS offense to 15 points in the final period.

Wheeler led Lilbourn in scoring and rebounding, notching 18 in each catagory. McClarty and David Williams added 16 each. Grant Dambach slipped in 13 and Cleo Willis contributed 11. Pierce topped all scorers on the night with his 24 point total. Albri Cassell had 16 for the Bluejays second highest.

The victory raised the LHS cagers season record to 14-3, having lost to Richland, East Prairie and Charleston.

Charleston opened the night's hardwood action with a come from behind 66-62 win paced by George Rodgers 32 points. Claude McFerren had 17 for Lilbourn's high.

Eagles Out Shoot Chaffee

BENTON — The Oran Eagles overwhelmed the Chaffee Red Devils 97-67 in the A bracket and I-Sc whipped Oran 39-36 and Oak Ridge won over Chaffee 67-36 in the two B Bracket games played here Tuesday night in the Scott Mississippi Conference tournament.

Mike Legrand led the Eagles in scoring with 25 points as Oran hit 44 field goals to 25 for Chaffee.

6-5 junior Scott Thomas led Chaffee in scoring with 31 points. Chaffee took a 27-21 first quarter lead and acted as if they were going to run away with the game. Oran came back in the second quarter to outpoint the Red Devils 24-18.

The Eagles really put on a scoring display in the third period netting 32 points to Chaffee's 10. All Chaffee could do was watch Oran put the ball in the basket the rest of the way.

Oran's B team wasn't able to keep pace with the big boys as I-SC used the last half to pull off the victory.

The score was tied at the half 28-28 and ISC outpointed the Eagles 8-7 in the third period and held on to post a 13-11 fourth period score.

Hurst led the Eagles with 10 points and Gary Wadlington had 12 for the Rams.

Oak Ridge had an easy time beating the Chaffee JV team as they took a 16-9 first period lead. Oak Ridge took only a two point advantage in each of the second and third periods but really ran wind in the last quarter to put the game out of doubt, scoring 24 points to only four for Chaffee.

Lang had 19 for Oak Ridge and Little had eight for the Red Devils.

Scott Central and Kelly battle it out Wednesday night in both the B and A brackets starting at 7:00.

Committes Under Pressure

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Legislative committees will be operating under mid session pressure this third calendar week of the 1972 legislative session.

Never in recent history have committees buckled down to heavy schedules so early in a session. Part of the credit, of course, goes to the authority to file bills before the second regular session.

New bills have been authorized for both houses since Dec. 1 and the lawmakers have taken substantial advantage of the change from the old procedure of not introducing legislation until the new session convenes.

Dramatic evidence of the new speedup is the fact that the Employment Security Committee of the House has scheduled a hearing Tuesday on the strict unemployment compensation compliance bill enactment.

That the Senate fought over and finally passed last Thursday.

With comparable dispatch, the Senate Airports Committee will consider the Missouri-St. Louis Airport Authority bill Wednesday. It passed the House Thursday as an effort to make sure that any new major airport in the St. Louis metropolitan area is built in Missouri.

The unemployment compensation bill caused days of turmoil and filibusters in the Senate this past week, even though many labor groups, business and industry organizations and Gov. Warren E. Hearnes ured its speedy

M e a n w h i l e a labor-supported version of the unemployment compensation bill providing extra benefits for jobless workers, is ready for debate in the House. Some House interests have expressed fear the House will pass it speedily but hold up on the strict compliance bill from the Senate until the Senate acts favorably on the laborsponsored bill.

The labor-oriented House bill would boost weekly benefits, provide unemployment payments during any period of a lockout and eliminate the present waiting week.

The tussles there should be enough to occupy any legislative body for a few days. But committees will be acting on a lot of other major legislation during the coming week. Consider:

A new try for an acceptable re-alignment of congressional districts, an issue that lost last year because of House-Senate conflicts and one that may now have to be decided by the federal courts—Monday afternoon in the Senate Apportionment Committee.

A Missouri law to put this state in compliance with the federal requirement that persons between 18 and 21 years of age be allowed to vote—Senate elections committee Wednesday night.

Give 18-year-olds all adult rights and responsibilities—the right to marry, make contracts, drink liquor and so on—Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday afternoon.

Public defender law to provide paid legal counsel for indigents—House Judiciary Committee Tuesday night.

Allow furloughs for good risk prisoners to make bedside visits, attend funerals, seek jobs or medical treatment—House Judiciary Committee Tuesday night and Senate Corrections Committee Tuesday afternoon.

New maximum security facility for incorrigibles from the Boonville Training School for Boys—Senate Corrections Committee Tuesday afternoon.

There are a lot more in the areas of education, welfare, transportation and ecology. Although many are repeaters from earlier sessions, the main thing is they're being given committee hearings earlier than ever before.

That means either a quick death or a far greater chance of passage by both houses.

Questions Considered By Judges

Was John Miller denied a jury trial unfairly?

These questions now are under consideration by three judges in Superior Court.

It started June 26 on the San Bernardino Freeway when Miller was cited for carrying an unsafe load—the Baron. The dog wore a helmet and goggles, and was perched on the back of Miller's motorcycle with his hind legs on the seat, front legs on his master's shoulders and tongue waving in the breeze.

Alhambra Municipal Judge Lothrop E. Smith convicted Miller on the traffic charge Aug. 23 and fined him $14 after denying a jury trial on grounds it involved an infraction and not a crime.

Appealing his case Thursday, Miller declared "the classification of a crime as an infraction is a recent invention of the legislature for the clearly stated purpose of denying trial by jury."

Besides, Miller argued, he didn't decide on Baron's riding style. Von Red Dog himself picked out the paws-up, taildown manner as the most comfortable position. Therefore, he contended, the dog did not constitute an unsafe load—and besides a jury should have determined the issue and not a judge alone.

TV Viewing Leads Some But Not All Children To Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television viewing may lead to violent acts by some children already prone to aggressiveness, a U.S. Surgeon General's report concluded Monday.

"The accumulated evidence, however, does not warrant the conclusion that televised violence has a uniformly adverse effect, nor the conclusion that it has adverse effect on the majority of children," said the 12 behavioral scientists who studied the problem for 2½ years.

"The trouble with this report is that like so much of what the administration has done on these things, the cynicism of anyody being interested in the truth is apparent from the beginning," he said.

Johnson criticized the decision by former Surgeon General William H. Stewart allowing the television industry to veto 7 of the 40 persons originally considered for the study committee.

The 12 scientists, in the fields of psychology, child development, sociology, psychiatry, political science and anthropology, said they feel there was a serious error in the selection process.

The study's primary benefit, he said, should be to stimulate more research on the effects of television violence.

"I do believe the data ... should provide the basis for intelligent action by the networks, the FCC and Congress," he said.

The study was requested March 5, 1969, by Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., who said he was "exceedingly troubled by the lack of any definitive information which would help resolve the question of whether there is a causal connection between televised crime and violence and antisocial behavior by individuals, especially children."

The committee said the question is a "very complex issue, for which there are no simple answers."

There is a need for more study in this area, the panel said, it followed orders to avoid making policy recommendations, and said solutions would be difficult anyway.

"If broadcasters simply changed the quantity balance between violent and other kinds of shows, it is not clear what the net effect would be," the study said.

"People hunt and choose the kinds of stimulus material they want. Violent material is as popular. If our society changed in no other way than changing the balance of television offerings, people, to some degree, would still seek out violent material.

"More drastic changes, such as general censorship, would clearly have wide effects, but of many kinds, and some of them distinctly undesirable."

Son Caught In Raid

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — "The greatest thing that happened to Bill was his getting busted. If he hadn't I'm sure he'd be dead now."

That was William S. Brandom Sr., speaking of his son, Bill Jr., and his arrest this summer in a series of drug raids in Clay and Platte Counties. It was not just another father speaking of his son being spared a worse fate by being arrested before the drug habit took his life.

Brandom says "it was undoubtedly the greatest shock of my entire life. I just couldn't believe it. We had the house staked out, knew who had come and gone, who the customers were and Bill had never been there before."

In the seven months that followed those raids, the younger Brandom has been in two hospitals, quit college, attempted suicide and spent two months in the Platte County jail.

Bill, 19, has served 42 days of a 90-day jail sentence and was released by Judge John Yeaman last week. He will serve the remainder of his sentence on weekends so he might have the chance to go to college again.

The Brandom youth says his arrest and conviction (he pleaded guilty Nov. 30 to a charge of possession of LSD) has hurt his family. It has also made him realize he could have died of repeated doses of cocaine and LSD. He said that since the fall of 1970 he had taken injections of cocaine and once, accidentally, a dose of heroin.

It was while he was at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, that Bill Jr., a former Eagle Scout and high school honor student, was introduced to drugs, he said.

"Everybody I knew there was using the stuff. Only two of the 24 people in my dormitory were straight."

He dropped out of Drake after one semester, returning home to William Jewell College where he quit after the arrest. Now he is going to a community college to repair the damage he believes he has caused himself and his family.

He was taken to a hospital for observation on the day of his arrest for what his parents were afraid was brain damage. The youth said he was "coming down" off the effect of 10 different drug pills, mostly LSD and MDS spiked with heroin, he said he had taken the night before.

"I was afraid to go out again and meet people," he said. "I was afraid to get into society again. And so I got a real strange idea and tried to slit my wrists. While I was cutting my wrists, two people came in and stopped me."

Brandom was then transferred to the psychiatric ward at Memorah Medical Center for three weeks.

About his father's comment that if he hadn't been busted he might be dead now, the son answers—"or worse."

"I've got a lot of mixed feelings about drugs. All drugs. The first thing they do is slow you down. Not just physically, they slow your whole life down. And you no longer function as you used to. You get a preoccupation with drugs. I was stoned all the time. I never went a day without smoking marijuana twice on top of acid."

His astonished father asked him how he was able to keep a habit that extreme from his family.

"I can tell you exactly," Brandom Jr., replied. "In drug movies you see how bizarre drugs make people and you think to yourself—if I was to see someone like that I'd know he was messed up on drugs. But that isn't the way it is. There are times when I'd sit at the dinner table and there would be a lot of times we were together and I was on drugs."

The prosecutor said he could remember times when his son seemed very elated or very depressed.

"There would be times I'd yell about his hair or the hours he was keeping," Brandom Sr., said. "And for the next day he'd be depressed and I'd lay off him. Then he'd be jubilant and I'd think, "Well, we're back in a good relationship.' I was so damned naive; it wasn't the relationship at all, it was the drugs.

"It was quite embarrassing— there's no doubt about that. After all the notoriety we did get, I got the feeling that it would be an objective lesson to a good many people, that this very same thing could happen in their own homes. And lo and behold this proved to be true because I had numerous calls from parents that had checked out their children and found out that their children were in fact on drugs."

Bank Bomber Remembered As Quiet, Nonviolent

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Old acquaintances recall Dr. Ronald Kaufman, named as the man who planted bombs in nine banks last summer, as a quiet, bright student who opposed violence as a way of solving problems such as civil rights and ending the war in Vietnam.

The FBI says the 33-year-old psychologist should be "considered armed and dangerous," but those who remember him here and in Chicago described him as gentle, thoughtful, nice, clean, quiet, sensitive, intelligent, intense and brilliant.

A nationwide hunt is under way for Kaufman, charged by the FBI with 12 counts in connection with bombs found in safe deposit boxes of three San Francisco banks. FBI spokesmen said Kaufman was identified through fingerprints found on components of bombs taken from nine banks in San Francisco, Chicago and New York. An official said further charges probably would be filed in the New York and Chicago incidents.

Notes directing police to the bombs said they were part of a new strategy to force changes in U.S. policies.

Bob Beyers, Stanford University information director who went to Mississippi in 1964 with Kaufman to do civil rights work, said: "He was quiet and soft-spoken and very bright."

"He wasn't the type to be out in front in any student

School Girl's Drug Habit

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — A 16-year-old high school girl has told officers she has a $100a-week drug habit and supplies about 100 other users at the school.

The girl, who is being held as a juvenile, was arrested Thursday at Muskogee High School.

She was served with a search warrant for her school locker and officers said they confiscated several syringes and other equipment, along with some narcotics and marijuana.

Dist. Atty. Jim Conrad said the girl told him she has a large enouch cache of narcotics to supply her own habit and furnish all the others for four months.

Her arrest was followed by a series of raids in which three men were arrested on several charges. The charges filed against the men were misdemeanors but Conrad said he plans to file other charges.

Interview Order Is Now Lifted

NEW YORK (AP)—A judge Saturday lifted his order temporarily prohibiting the Ladies Home Journal from publishing what the author says were interviews with industrialist Howard Hughes.

"I'm satisfied that the stay granted by me represents unconstitutional prior restraint and that in the interests of justice I should vacate it, which I am hereby doing," said State Supreme Court Justice Samuel N. Gold.

"My adhering to prior restraint would work great mischief and harm," he said.

At an unusual Saturday hearing, lawyers for the magazine said that 3.5 million copies, half the total circulation, were being distributed when Gold's order was served Frida.

He had acted on a suit by a Nevada firm, which claims exclusive rights to the life story of Hughes, the billionaire financier.

In an affidavit presented to the judge, publisher John Mack Carter of the Ladies Home Journal said that if publication were halted, "irreparable damage" would be caused. He said the magazine would lose more than $3 million in advertising revenue and $1.4 million in subscriber revenue, as well as loss of good will.

The magazine had distributed advance copies of the issue to several news organizations with a Tuesday morning release date.

Before You Buy

by Margaret Dana

How good are you at telling a real bargain from a phony one? It can make quite a difference in how far your money goes and what you get in return.

Take, for instance, the traditional January "white sales," which bring low prices on bed-sheets, bath and hand towels, table linens, etc. They always sound alluring, and can be a budget stretcher.

But keep in mind as you look over the advertisements, and then at the goods in the stores, that there is a definite difference between "irregulars" and "seconds."

The Federal Trade Commission has ruled that an "irregular" of sheets — or anything, for that matter — is a product that varies from the maker's standards and has been rejected by his inspection line. But its defects are smaller ones, in such as a measurement of size that's slightly off, or printed patterns that don't quite match up. These defects do not damage the product.

"Seconds," on the other hand, can have and usually do have damaging defects. These may be cuts, tears or holes of some kind which affect the wear and durability of the textile. Prices for "seconds," therefore, ought to be lower cost, even than for "irregulars."

A smart buyer will try not to buy either kind without being able to spread the merchandise out and inspect it. This may not be easy to do in a store absorbed in the day of packaged and sealed goods.

A store should at least have a sample package opened so that you can look it over and perhaps get some idea of just what the defects are, or are likely to be.

One particular place trouble can begin, especially in bath towels, is a badly woven selvage edge. Even when a towel is wrapped in a plastic pakage, it may be possible for you to get a close look at a section of selvage. Bend it back and forth — does the weaving seem tight all the way to the edge? If the crosswise threads do not extend all the way to the outside edge, going over and under the "warp" or length - sie threads, and returning across the towel in an unbroken loop, you're going to have a towel which will soon fray under use and laundering.

Buying pantyhose and stockings, or socks for men, is another spot where the matter of "irregulars" and "seconds" comes into the price — and the bargain. Just remember that while "irregular" hosiery may have some crooked spots, or be skimped upon in the measurements, it is not supposed to have broken threads or actual holes.

"Seconds" may have and usually do have something damaged. So weigh carefully the different prices of regulars, irregulars and seconds to see where you really get the most WEAR for your money.

January and early February sales also usually bring clearances of goods from a variety of other departments in a store. A clearance sale held due to the store's need to clear for bed-sheets, bath and hand towels, table linens, etc. They always sound alluring, and can be a budget stretcher.

In a reputable store the stocks offered in such a clearance are usually sound, being neither defective nor of inferior quality. Often the left-overs are the result of some wrong guesses by the store as to which colors, sizes or styles would be most in demand. If these leftovers fit you, or your purpose, they may offer a good bargain in warm clothing, etc. with small outlay.

Another kind of clearance sale which offers excellent bargains, if you are on the ball, is the preinventory sale. There is nothing phony about the reason for such a sale. It is better fiscal bookkeeping for a store to keep its stocks down to a planned level, especially when counting them all for inventory. So before the counting starts, it makes sense to clear out excess merchandise. The more out the store may cut the price far down, almost to wholesale cost.

But there can be a catch to this. Look out if the advertisement says that "special purchases" have been added to the clearance merchandise. You won't be able to judge the "special purchases" from having seen them before, and knowing what their prices and values are in relation to the sale price.

One reminder about bargain shopping for appliances: There are two kinds of defects which may lower their price outside of a change in models or the offer of floor samples.

One defect is scratches or dents that mar the appearance but not the performance. The other is an actual defect in a part which prevents the appliance from working. This can be a bargain.

Japan Shies Away From Militarism

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

TOKYO (NEA)

The world's occasionally voiced fears that a new militarism might arise in Japan are well understood by the Japanese. But the weight of evidence against the prospect seems overwhelming.

When I talked with H. E. Naomi Nishimura, director general of the Self-Defense Agency, his convincing sensitivity to these fears was the dominant impression. The realistic Japanese are themselves never without memory of their old World War II image.

There is some feeling here that, even if trained manpower were needed to help an Asian neighbor in a natural disaster, no uniformed Japanese could be sent to foreign soil.

Moreover, the pacifism in this country is real, embracing all age segments. Japan's 270,000-man defense force is not admired here at home, and recruiting is difficult.

Popular anger lingered months after a Japanese fighter plane collided with a commercial aircraft, killing more than 160. A formation of fighters was supposed to do a "fly-by" over Tokyo during a recent defense force review. It was called off on account of "smog." In fact, the skies that day were brilliantly clear.

Nishimura offered new assurances that Japan's self-defense posture is to continue totally nonnuclear.

The country's ground force of 180,000 is frozen at that level. Expansion plans, intended to keep defense expenditures at roughly one per cent of the nation's Gross National Product, involve only the navy and the air force (fairly well-stabilized at around 1,000 planes).

Nishimura said in interview that there can be no early change in Japan's established reliance upon the U.S. nuclear umbrella and its Pacific forces stationed in Japan and Okinawa.

But this dependence, while accepted as necessary by countless practical-minded Japanese, is deeply resented by many. Few in this world like being on the receiving end in a big-protector relationship.

Then, of course, there are the radical students and politically-minded labor unions. The newest street-theater rioting and work stoppages show again how tough it is for Japan to approve the pact restoring its control over Okinawa but allowing us to keep bases there.

These resentments, with their obvious political impact, are used by the Japanese to justify saying "no" to American urgings that they take on a larger share of defense costs in the Western Pacific.

The radicals' anti-Americanism is old stuff, noisy but of little real concern in this capital. More worrisome is the growth of this feeling among others, especially since the "Nixon shocks" on economic policy and his planned 1972 visit to Peking.

What burns some influential Japanese is the sense of inequality which the President's surprises laid upon them. Said one official:

"Is he paying more attention to China than to us because Peking has the atomic bomb? We would not want to, but we could get the bomb very quickly if we so decided."

The emotional Japanese moved from the animosities of World War II into strong, trustful friendship with America. Nixon's moves cause some to suggest today that they have been in a position of "over-trust." The great bond has weakened, and could deteriorate further.

Yet most Japanese still like America and its people and feel their security and well-being linked with ours. Nearly bare of raw materials, they know the high vulnerability of their complex 1971 economy. Some offer that vulnerability as the firmest practical proof that they could not return to militaristic posture even if they wished to.

COSTLY EDUCATION

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas resident who entered the University of Texas this fall can expect to pay approximately $8,827 for his four-year education, the school says.

By 1976, the entering freshman student can look forward to a four-year tab of $11,271 and by 1980 that projected figure will have risen to $13,698, according to the office of Student Financial Aids.

Frankly Speaking

By Thomas F. Eagleton

SECRECY IN GOVERNMENT WIDENS THE CREDIBILITY GAP

Secrecy in government is nothing new. There has always been the tendency of the bureaucrat to cover up his mistakes and there has always been a need to keep some few things truly secret for the sake of national security.

But the last seven years have brought us far past normal government secrecy to a very significant new fact of national life: the credibility gap.

From a government "of the people, by the people, for the people," a government has evolved that is increasingly separate from the people, closed off behind a curtain of half-truth and secrecy and, sometimes, the outright lie. People are worried, and properly so, about the way they are being "handled" instead of informed, not just on the small issues but on the major events of our time.

Legislation Not Enough

It does not appear that excessive secrecy in government can be legislated away. Congress tried to "open" government to public scrutiny through the Freedom of Information Act in 1966. This legislation did not open wide every government file cabinet, nor was it intended to. But it did make disclosure the rule, at least in theory. The law provides for exceptions, of course -- classified information, interagency memos, trade secrets, investigatory files for law enforcement cases and similar categories of data.

Unfortunately, while the letter of the law was changed in 1966, the spirit of the bureaucrat remains the same. His ingenuity in circumventing the Freedom of Information Act has been noteworthy -- high fees for searching for and duplicating documents, long delays and a knack for losing things in the shuffle.

Some agencies fail to provide index files and master listings of their documents -- and then accuse inquirers of fishing for information. Others comingle information accessible under the Freedom of Information Act with material falling among its exceptions -- and then claim that the whole file is classified or that separating the data will be too time-consuming. Vulnerable data is hidden in computers-- and nobody seems to know the program for getting it out.

As for the exceptions, the established policy of the Executive branch has been to interpret them as broadly as possible. Given the already overbroad language of the exceptions in the statute, that covers a lot of ground.

Congress Can't Find Out

There is a certain irony in Congress legislating the free flow of information from the Executive to the people when Congress itself often cannot find out what is going on downtown. Senator Ervin is still trying to pry out of the Administration information about what is being collected in various government- held data banks.

Information about our involvement, military and otherwise, with other nations is notoriously incomplete and difficult to come by, even for use in closed sessions. Often Congress cannot even determine how, when, where, and even if the funds it appropriates for specific programs are being spent.

Hopefully, Congress will begin to fight back more forcefully in the coming months. Plainly, the Freedom of Information Act needs some patching up. More importantly, however, Congress is going to have to face up to the problem of how to change attitudes in the bureaucracy.

The Whole Truth

At the heart of the matter is accountability. We as citizens of a free nation cannot allow our government to operate in the shadows, keeping from our view everything except what they want us to know ... and what we find out despite them.

The press has the major responsibility in this area. It is the conduit through which information, if it flows at all, flows to the average citizen. It is critical to us all that the press digs as hard as it can to get as much information as possible ... and that it scrutinizes that information carefully to ensure that it is complete and truthful.

The press's job would be a lot easier ... and the country would be a lot better off ... if government leaders would recognize the one essential fact that, if acted upon, would make the credibility gap a thing of the past: It is not telling the public the whole truth that threatens the structure of our society, but the refusal to inform the public fully and the mistrust that secrecy breeds.

A SOURCE OF PRIDE

HOUSTON (AP) — A Wisconsin researcher says the role of the grandchild in our society is significant because the child is a source of pride and comfort to his grandparents.

WHICH GIRL WILL HE CHOOSE?

That's the problem facing the bewildered - looking fellow in the middle: Leighton (Oley) Olson, son of Mrs. Steve Canyon.

It all starts when Mrs. Canyon helps finance girl pilot Bitsy Beekman's plane, in return for Oley's flying lessons.

Oley won't come to Bitsy, so Bitsy goes to Oley, who is a sophmore at Maumee University.

Complications ensue when Bitsy, who has a crush on Oley, finds that Oley has a crush on Toddy -- a beautiful brunette heart-breaker. Then, Bitsy gets to meet ...

THE "CAMPUS CON KING"!

Honest Onion Rings is his name and "big-wheeling" is his game. But Honest Onion really rings the bell as a nice guy, as Bitsy discovers when she really needs help.

Can Bitsy and her new-found friend extricate Oley from his innocent involvement in the racket plaguing today's college campuses?

POLLUTION TOLERANT

Grows almost anywhere is an accurate description of this plant — dwarf annual vinca. It thrives under adverse conditions that would make other plants give up the ghost.

It thrives almost anywhere. It is tolerant of pollution so can be used close to the road.

It is capable of standing extreme heat, drought, and other adverse conditions.

And it has no insect pests or diseases that bother it.

Wouldn't you think that every gardener would be growing it?

You can plant dwarf vinca in sun or in semi-shade — it will produce its shiny, deep green foliage and profuse bloom in either location.

Flowers may be rose, light pink, pure white or white with red centers, called "eyes".

Plant the slow-growing seeds outdoors after soil has warmed or indoors for earlier bloom.

Washington Report by Senator Symington

MISSOURI SESQUICENTENNIAL HONORED IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, D.C. In honor of the 150th anniversary of Missouri's statehood, the Library of Congress here in Washington, D. C. has opened an exhibit as part of the state's sesquicentennial celebration.

The exhibit, which will be on display until September 4, consists of photographs, old maps, drawings, engravings, music, political cartoons, and rare books relating Missouri's history from its very beginning.

Among 150 items selected for the exhibit are historic documents as well -- the original enabling act, the Congressional resolution, and the Presidential proclamation admitting the new state. Also included is the first Constitution of the state of Missouri.

STATEHOOD. Formally proclaimed a state by President James Monroe on August 10, 1821, Missouri was the 2nd state west of the Mississippi and the 24th state to enter the Union.

The territory that is now Missouri had been under the domain of both the French and the Spanish , and was finally acquired by the United States through the Louisana Purchase in 1803.

Ste. Genevieve on the Mississippi River was founded in 1735 as the first permanent settlement in the state, and St. Louis, founded by fur trader Auguste Chouteau in 1764, was the birthplace of the new state, being the site of Missouri's first constitutional convention.

St. Charles became the first capital of the state in 1821. The permanent capital, in the "City of Jefferson" was established in 1826.

INDUSTRIES. Among Missouri's most successful industries in its early days were iron ore, lead, and fur trading.

The Kansas City stockyards, opened in 1871 primarily as a feed and resting place for cattle en route from Abilene to Chicago, quickly attracted large packing firms and became a major center for the meatpacking industry.

NATURE STRIKES. Also found at the exhibit are accounts of two great natural disasters in Missouri. An 1811 earthquake, one of the most destructive in history, struck New Madrid County and other areas of Southeast Missouri. The tremors from the earthquake continued for almost one year and extended as far as Charleston, South Carolina.

The St. Louis tornado in 1896 laid waste a 6 square mile area of the city, killing 140 persons, destroying more than 300 buildings, and causing damages estimated at $10 million.

MISSOURI'S PEOPLE. Portraits and histories of well-known personalities who played a prominent role in Missouri's early growth are also on display. Among them: Missouri's first United States Senator, Thomas Hart Benton, Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain), Joseph Pulitizer, and Daniel Boone, appointed by the Spanish as a justice of the peace for the district of Femme Osage when Missouri was part of the Louisiana Territory.

Joseph Charless, the first printer west of the Mississippi and founder of the state's first paper, the Missouri Gazette in St. Louis, 1808, is also included as is Carl Schurz, German born political reformer and journalist. Schurz campaigned for President Lincoln and fought in the Civil War battles of Bull Run, Chancellorsville, and Gettyburg, Later appointed by President Hayes as Secretary of the Interior, Schurz worked to develop a national park system and was a staunch supporter of civil service reform while serving as a member of the United States Senate.

Missourians visiting the nation's capital this year will find this exhibit most worthwhile in its presentation of a sampling of the rich historical heritage of our state.

Rep. Concerned Over Arrest

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rep. E.J. "Lucky" Cantrell, D-Overland, made little effort Friday to hide his depression over news of his son's arrest on burglary chrges in Wentzville earlier this week.

Cantrell, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and a candidate for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer, said he has hopes his son, Robert Steven Cantrell, 20, will be exonerated.

"He told us in a phone call yesterday that he had no part in it," Cantrell said of the burglary of a St. Charles County veterinary clinic.

He was driving the car, Cantrell quoted his son as saying, but an examination showed no evidence of drug usage on young Cantrell's part.

Cantrell said he learned two of his son's companions had needle marks. Five young persons were reported in the group arrested.

A bottle of barbituates was found in the car and identified as the property of the clinic, Cantrell said, adding, "he'll have his day in court."

cantrell said his son had not lived in the family home for three years.

"We have tried to raise all our children to respect other people and respect the property of others," Cantrell said.

He indicated he and Mrs. Cantrell were making an effort to secure a bond so his son could be freed until the preliminary hearing Jan. 25.

Superman Adopted By Metropolis, Ill.

METROPOLIS, Ill. (AP) -- Superman, that fearless crusader for truth, justice and the American way, is being adopted by the citizens of Metropolis.

"This is not a sham or a joke," says Bob Westerfield, a Metropolis resident who first thought of using the Man of Steel to put Metropolis on the map. "We intend to treat Superman in the proper perspective."

Westerfield and the Metropolis Chamber of Commerce say they already have the backing of National Periodicals, Inc., which publishes Superman comic books.

"They've promised to send us the uniform George Reeves wore in the original television series," Westerfield, 43, said.

"We also plan to set up a committee to read and answer letters mailed to Superman in care of Metropolis."

The Superman known to generations of Americans came to a fictional city called Metropolis in a rocket, sent by his parents who died when the planet of Krypton blew up.

Raised as Clark Kent by a middle- class American couple, he went to work as a reporter on the Metropolis Daily Planet, shedding his mild-mannered cover when he was needed to fight crime.

The Illinois Metropolis, on the Ohio River, is hardly the place for a big-time crime fighter. The town's 7,000 citizens, however, are working on the image. One of the proposals would change the name of the Metropolis Daily News, a weekly newspaper, to the Metropolis Daily Planet.

"That tower is 200 feet high," Westerfield says. "You could see him from anywhere in Massac County."

Harold Mescher, president of the Chamber of Commerce, says that businesses, for a fee, will be able to buy certificates of membership in a Superman Club. By proclamation, visiting dignitaries also will be designated honorary Superman.

Money from the membership fees is earmarked for the city treasury.

Fine Levied For Sleeping In Box

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A young man who for the last nine months has slept in a box on the roof of a six-story building in downtown Boise has been fined $15 for lodging without permission.

The 24-year-old former Californian told Magistrate Edward A. Johnson he didn't want his boss to find out he slept on a roof because "he would think I was an oddball and fire me."

The judge said the defendant had a steady job, was cleanlooking and intelligent.

He said the young man told him he didn't like sleeping indoors. "He said the last time he slept indoors he caught a head cold." Temperatures have been below freezing most nights since November.

He said he slept in his clothes without the protection of blankets or a sleeping bag. Each morning he would clean up and shave at the Boise Rescue Mission.

After questioning the man at length in court, Judge Johnson fined him a minimum $15 Wednesday and suspended a two-day jail sentence.

"Here is a man who is a real island," the judge said. "But he seemed content as anyone his age. He doesn't appear to be an oddball at all."

Broomfield Files For Hull's Seat

He told newsmen he has traveled 6,000 miles in the 6th District of northwestern Missouri and feels his prospects "look very good" to win the nomination.

In his travels around the district, Broomfield said he found the more urban counties of Buchanan, Clay and Platte becoming increasingly congested.

"Urban blight scars St. Joseph and soon will come to Clay County," he said in his statement. "Pollution of our air is choking us. Our water resource is polluted to the point that it carries a foul odor.

"Population increases so rapidly that our schools cannot keep up and services are inadequate. Road and highway needs go without solution.

"While this happens in the urban areas, our rural areas are literally dying. Rural poverty has gone unnoticed, but it is just as bad as the poverty in the ghetto."

He mentioned other problems besetting the area but said improvements can be made.

"I believe that northwest Missouri can do better and I believe that America can do better," he said.

Broomfield's wife died in 1970 and he is rearing his two daughters — Andrea and Leah.

He is a graduate of William Jewell College at Liberty and now is engaged in the insurance business in Kansas City. Before serving in the legislature he was a teacher of American government and American history at North Kansas City High School.

Mother Files For Son's Seat In Legislature

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) -- Rep. Morris Westfall, R-Halfway, filed for re-election in the 133rd House District Thursday at 2:39 p.m. in the Secretary of State's office.

At 4:27 p.m. his mother, Mrs. R. E. "Johnny" Westfall filed for election in the same district. The secretary of state's staff said Mrs. Westfall did not give a reason why she filed against her son.

What's The Law

Litter Act Not Valid

THE CASE OF THE REVOLUTIONARY ORDINANCE
By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

A group of crime fighting city officials decided to clean up the streets first. Consequently, they flexed their muscles and enacted an antilittering ordinance. In effect, the ordinance prohibited the door-to-door distribution of any kind of literature without first obtaining permission from the property owner to make the drop. The idea, of course, was to prevent unwanted handbills, posters, circulars, booklets, etc. from being crinkled up and or, at least, tossed into the street.

Deeming the ordinance a curb on their activities, several protesters attacked the validity of the ordinance in court.

"It's stupid," they argued. "How are we supposed to obtain the consent of property owners? Unless they first read what we have to say, how are they expected to know whether or not they want our literature? Obviously, the ordinance violates freedom of speech."

"While a person may have a Constitutional right to speak," was the answer, "he doesn't have a Constitutional right to litter. Nor does he have the right to force his ideas upon anyone else. Consequently, the ordinance doesn't interfere with anybody's prerogatives and is perfectly valid."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you uphold the validity of the ordinance?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that Courts have long recognized that, in practice, house -to- house distribution of written material constitutes one of the principal means of implementing the First Admendment right of communication and it may not be prohibited. If the present ordinance had been in force in eighteenth century America, noted the judge, the colonies may well have preserved the cleanliness of their streets only at the price of stilling the dissident voices of such pamphleteers as Thomas Paine, Andrew Eliot and John Carmichael.

THE BALKAN ASSIGNMENT. By Joe Poyer. Doubleday. $5.95.

Today the "adventure" novel, which has many fans, mixes mayhem and murder, a bit of suspense and a melange of incredible feats by the principal character. Poyer has entered the ranks of those who do the trick in this field.

The central figure is Chris Boyd, a former U.S. Air Force pilot who is trying to make a living with a little air freight line in Italy. One of his customers, a German named Klaus Maher, draws Chris into a scheme to salvage a million dollars worth of stolen gold bars that the Germans had stashed away in a mountain cave on an island off Yugoslavia, as World War II was nearing an end. Maher also has recruited a former Yugoslav partisan, Mikhail Kostlov, who knows how to get the gold out.

The idea is that Chris will fly the gold to a black market in the Far East, and the trio will split the proceeds. But it isn't that simple. Chris learns from a shadowy agent from Interpol that the gold is destined for a neo-Nazi underground — and will Chris help break up their pipeline? Double-cross? Triple-cross?

Cinderella Success

And it couldn't have happened to a nicer Cinderella!

She was an unknown housewife when she recorded "Harper Valley PTA."

Almost before she could bat a pretty eye-lash she was the toast of the musical world with the hit song of 1968 and one of the most phenomenal hits to ever come out of Nashville, Tennessee.

People everywhere were singing the song and they all wanted to see and hear Jeannie C. perform it.

Fame arrived overnight, but the preparation was slow. Jeannie C. Riley spent two years cutting demo records and working as a secretary in Nashville before "Harper Valley PTA" changed everything.

And before that she spent those teenage years in her home town of Anson, Texas listening, learning and singing.

There were no professional entertainers in her family, but "they all have musical talent." Jeannie said. "My mother used to sing and daddy worshipped Hank Snow. I have an uncle, Johnny Moore who in recent years has recorded for Hickory Records. So the interest in music was always there."

At age 16 Jeannie C. Riley suddenly began to sing. No lessons, no single person brought it about, and what she sang was country music.

"I love all kinds of music," she recalls, "but I felt closest to country music and I think that today the public likes me best when I am doing modern country."

Which brings up the Jeannie C. Riley image — mini skirts and a certain wordly sophistication that Jeannie says emphatically is not like the real girl at all.

"I want to change that image." she declared. "I want to build a more wholesome image. I'd like to wear a granny dress sometimes and I'd like to record sentimental ballads and convince people that I'm not like the heroine of 'Harper Valley PTA.'"

In May, 1971, Gene Scott, Jeannie's business manager, negotiated an agreement with Buddy Lee, president of Buddy Lee Attractions, Inc. of Nashville.

"This is a very important change for me," she said. "I think having an outstanding agent like Buddy Lee is one of the best things that could happen to me."

Jeannie admits that she is a perfectionist who has never been "completely satisfied with any single phase" of her career.

But wise observers say she has grown and improved steadily. She has a string of fine records to her credit, including: "There Never Was a Time." "Back Side of Dallas." "Things Go Better With Love." "The Girl Most Likely." "Country Girl," and "Oh Singer," which established her as one of the great, durable young stars of the 1970's.

One-Third Mo. Residents Not Getting Stamps

ST. LOUIS (AP) — More than a third of the residents of missouri who are eligible for food stamps and other government benefits are not receiving them because they don't know their rights, the President's Committee on Health Education was told Wednesday.

The statement came from Mrs. Daniel L. Schlafly, wife of the president of the St. Louis school board. She was among witnesses who testified during a daylong midwest hearing of the committee, which was told by the President to gather information on improving health education.

Ecologist Barry Commoner of Washington University said that privately financed groups concerned with providing better health systems are doing a better job of making the public aware of pollution hazards than is the federal government. He said the government should "shake loose" funds from its own agencies and give the money to non-government groups.

The hearing was the third of several being held around the nation. Information gathered will be presented at a national health education forum in New Orleans March 21-22.

Abzug Supporters Evicted From House

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 women were evicted from the House galleries Tuesday when they demonstrated in behalf of a move to censure President Nixon.

They stood and held up banners after Rep. Bella Abzug, DN.Y., made a speech explaining her resolution to censure the President for not fixing a specified date for withdrawal of troops from Indochina.

They applauded during Mrs. Abzug's speech and brief supporting remarks by Reps. William F. Ryan, D-N.Y.; Parren J. Mitchell, D-Md.; and Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y.

They were warned by Speaker Carl Albert that demonstrations from the galleries violate House rules.

Albert ordered the galleries in which the visitors were seated to be cleared when they continued and hoisted their signs.

After the demonstration, Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes, D-Fla., denounced the demonstrators and said their action "flaunts the tradition and dignity of the House and is an insult to the constitutional process."

Pep Pill Seizure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials announced today the seizure of one million amphetamine pills worth about $1.5 million which they said were exported to Mexico by a major American drug manufacturer, then smuggled into the United States illegally.

The Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs said the crackdown had cut off the major source of pep pills to 12 Southern states.

The investigation, called "Operation Blackjack" lasted 10 months and ended in the arrest of 80 persons, the BNDD said.

Daniel Traglina, BNDD's deputy director for operations, said an hour before a Washington news conference the Strasenburgh prescription products division of the Pennwalt Corp. was ordered to demonstrate why its license to export amphetamines should not be revoked.

BNDD agents described Strasenburg as the largest single exporter of amphetamines and the second-largest producer in the United States.

A decision on whether to seek criminal action against against Strasenburg officials still is pending, Traglina said.

Over the last 18 months, BNDD agents said, the firm shipped four-fifth of a ton of amphetamines to Mexico, most of which they assume was returned to illicit drug channels in the United States.

Distribution of the pep pills was made to illicit markets in New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Kentucky, Florida, Colorado, Mississippi and Arkansas, the bureau said.

Construction To Begin On Highway

Construction on Highway 25 from Dexter to White Oak, which will include widening, resurfacing and shouldering, will begin this spring, said William H. Shaw, District 10 Highway Engineer.

Shaw said the first project will include 16½ miles of the highway from Dexter south to the west junction of Route 62. The contract has been awarded to the Tri-State Asphalt Company of Alton, Ill., at a cost of about $1.4 million and will include widening surface to 24 feet, resurfacing and shouldering.

The southernmost project extends from junction Route 62, 12½ miles to near White Oak. The contract, in the amount of approximately $850,000, was awarded to the Missouri Petroleum Company of near St. Louis. It also consists of widening to 24 feet, resurfacing and shouldering.

Shaw said the construction will start in the spring as soon as weather permits. He said both companies will be stockpiling materials this winter and will begin when the weather breaks.

Shaw said his department has no positive control on the work but it is anticipated the work will be accomplished during the construction season.

A contract has also been awarded to the J. W. Githens Construction Company, Poplar Bluff, for the construction of two bridges and some resurfacing work on Highway 53 and Route J. The bridge construction is in connection with channel improvement work being accomplished by the Corps of Engineers.

The contractor plans to begin the bridge construction on Route J around February 1 and Route J will be closed to through traffic during the construction. Route J runs between Highways 53 and 25. Construction on Highway 53 will be done under traffic.

Most of them look much like the cars people have seen moving along railroad tracks for half a century or more. There are boxcars and flatcars and tank cars and such.

But this is truly a case where appearances are deceiving. Even the cars that look so familiar are very different. And entirely new types of cars have joined them -- some covered with "snow," others that "breathe."

Each year an average of a billion dollars is spent on new freight cars. Railroads spend about two-thirds of this amount-- which accounts for about two- thirds of all railroad capital outlays. Private car lines and leasing companies, including railroad subsidiaries, invest the r :st.

In addition, more than 80,000 cars are rebuilt.

Even so, the railroads concede -- in fact, they're telling everyone who will listen, including members of Congress -- that the pace of their investments in both equipment and plant must be stepped up, if the freight load of the future -- expected to double by 1985 - is to be efficiently handled.

The key to the future, the railroads emphasize, is in the hands of the federal government. And they are joined by the trucking industry and regulated water carriers in calling for regulatory and financial changes that will help make the necessary capital funds available.

But that's another story

BIGGEST DIFFERENCE: SIZE

The biggest difference between the old freight cars and the new ones being placed in service is size. Cars currently being retired have an average capacity of 61 tons. Those replacing them average 81 tons.

This increased capacity - coupled with changing traffic patterns that have produced longer hauls -- means that an average carloading today generates more than twice as many ton-miles of freight moved as did a carloading in the 1940s and three times as many as in the '30s.

In overall terms, the bigger cars mean that, although the number of freight cars in service has dropped slightly over the past 10 years, the total capacity of the fleet has been steadily increasing.

But size is only one of the ways in which the new freight cars are superior to their predecessors. They roll better, too, because of improved roller bearings and stabilized journal bearings. Ninety - seven percent of all new freight cars are equipment with roller bearings, and nearly 600,000 of all cars now in service are so equipped - more than fivetimes as many as in 1960.

As a result, there has been, since 1960, a nearly 90 percent reduction in the setting out of cars after the detection of overheated axle bearings -- in other words, "ho. boxes." Freight cars now travel an average of approximately 2 million miles between such incidents. If not undetected, hot boxes are a frequent cause of derailments.

Other improvements in general purpose freight cars include cushion - type underframes for a smoother ride, cargo securing devices for minimizing in- transit damage and wide door openings for mechanized loading and unloading.

STILL THE WORKHORSE

The general purpose freight car -- in its various forms -- is still the workhorse of the fleet. But, as early as 1870, when refrigerator cars were developed, railroaders were thinking about the specialized needs of certain shippers.

In the past decade, the drive to provide equipment tailor-made to the special requirements of shippers has accelerated.

Here are some examples:

*The "snowy" freight cars, which are actually covered hoppers. The snowed-on look comes from a two-inch exterior coating of foam insulation. Capable of carrying four times as much cargo as conventional refrigerator cars, the "snowy" hoppers eliminate crating, reduce in-transit damages and cut loading and unloading time.

* Aerated cars, which handle dry bulk materials ranging from white flour to carbon black. Pneumatic loading and unloading mechanisms "inhale" cargo at loading point, "exhale" at destination.

* Double- and triple - deck rack cars, which now haul an estimated 54 percent of the new automobiles and trucks produced annually -- more than a six- fold increase since 1959.

* Side - loading "all door" boxcars, which -- along with other huge- door types -- are proven cost- savers allowing improved mechanical handling of cargo.

* Specially designed cable reel cars, which handle the cable used for transmitting communications signals and supplying light, heat and power. The cars -- with capacities up to 180,000 pounds -- carry all sizes and weights of reels, sometimes with roll-on and roll-off loading.

There are, of course, other such innovative pieces of equipment -- and still more are in the planning stages. But the numbers and kinds of specialized railroad cars are not as important as the concept they represent -- a concept of customer - tailored service that makes rail transport feasible and profitable to a whole new sector of American business.

Academic Truths Bent, Twisted

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)

A few days ago a prestigious professor at one of this nation's most respected universities told me he had chosen early retirement. He could no longer endure the lowering of academic standards at the school he deeply loved. He had been there a quarter-century.

My friend had seen work by "honor" students whom he would have listed as failing or barely passing a few years back. He had seen fellow professors shrug their shoulders at sloppy workmanship in class and in reports.

All this hit home, because for a time in World War II I had seen this man in action. He had a genuine veneration for finding the truth, regardless of the consequences.

Later I was with a group questioning another professor of some international fame at this same university. The topic was why so many teachers have abandoned objectivity for activism. His answer was simple: "They want to be popular with their students."

Again, this reporter was at a number of sessions a few weeks back at which economic professors gave results of their current research. The reports and the question period following gave clear evidence that some of these social scientists had no knowledge of very important occurrences which bore heavily on their research. Some papers completely ignored known facts; questions from the audience gave evidence these scholars had not bothered to check out some of the most elementary data available.

In a number of sessions on environment, pollution and industrial accidents there was great emphasis on sensationalism. Questioning brought out that data was lacking for some of the more frightening predictions. Data was ignored which tended to prove the opposite of what the researchers were dramatizing.

All too frequently dire predictions were followed by pleas for more government and private funds to subsidize the research being done by the scientist speaking.

The suspicion grows that growing numbers of scientists are sensationalizing dangers to gain a name in their profession to win more funds to support their endeavors. Increasing evidence indicates some of our highly respected scientists do not hesitate to bend the truth if they believe the ends they seek justify the means.

Some time back this reporter sought out the views of well-known scientists on the ABM (antiballistic missile) dispute. I listened to several of these men talk publicly, then questioned them afterward in private on the statements they had made.

Out of the public gaze, when presented with data which contradicted their assertions, they admitted their statements were not true. In explanation, they implied that regardless of their accuracy or lack of it, their statements were for a good cause and served that cause.

These experiences are most disturbing. A democracy works only when we have access to the facts as nearly as men can discover them.

Directions of the Consumer

By RICHARD L. WORSNOP
Editorial Research Reports

(Editor's Note: Consumer Assembly '72, sponsored by the Consumer Federation of America, will open in Washington on Jan. 26.)

WASHINGTON - American consumers are on the march -- to several different drums and in many directions. Although every adult American buys goods and services, the consumer movement remains diffuse. Concerted action by private groups is difficult to achieve, and the fragmented and overlapping authority of government agencies can and does lead to buck- passing and inaction.

The 1970s, however, may bring a measure of unity to a movement that has virtually unlimited membership potential and hence should have the power to sweep all opposition aside. Ralph Nader is attempting to form an army of "public citizens" to safeguard the rights of consumers. In addition, the several Nader organizations and other consumer groups are pressing Congress to enact legislation setting up independent agencies in government to look after product safety and consumer protection.

Ironically, perhaps, the consumer movement has been fueled by rising affluence. Manufacturers contend that most products are safer and more reliable today than five or ten years ago. That may be so, but it is also true that the average consumer has many more possessions than formerly. Thus, the chances that something he owns will break down sometime during the year are correspondingly greater.

Consumerism has implications broader than those involved in the simple malfunction of appliances. Families with faulty TV sets, washiers, dryers, and air conditioners are likely to complain not only about the products themselves but also about the high cost -- and sometimes inferior performance -- of repair services. Moreover, the cost of maintaining appliances can lead to complaints about the cost of electrical or gas power. And the attempt of utility companies to meet rising energy demands often is accompanied by a public outcry against the air and water pollution produced by power plants and the scarring of countryside by pipelines or electrical transmission lines.

To the casual observer, it would appear that consumers have scored some notable victories in recent years. Congress has approved legislation on motor vehicle safety, pipeline safety, radiation control, and intrastate meat inspection, among other measures. Consumer leaders nevertheless remain dissatisfied. They complain that enforcement of such laws tends to be lax and that the government agencies charged with consumer protection generally do a poor job.

Still, consumer criticism of regulatory agencies has brought some remedial action, especially in the case of the much - maligned Federal Trade Commission. The first sign of a major change came June 9, 1970, when then- Chairman Caspar W. Weinberger announced that the FTC's six operating bureaus would be reduced to two and that more field offices would be established outside of Washington. The purpose of the reorganization, Weinberger said, was to speed the processing of complaints in the field without going through a bureaucratic maze. The FTC currently is engaged in a campaign to halt deceptive advertising.

Although heartened by the FTC's new display of muscle, consumer groups are preparing a major effort in this presidential election year to obtain legislation setting up a new regulatory approach. The idea is to consolidate most existing regulatory functions in a pair of new super- agencies -- one for product safety and one for consumer protection.

Some observers find it ironic that consumer groups, with their low opinion of existing regulatory agencies, should be calling for creation of two new, more powerful ones. Ralph Nader, among others, is aware of the pitfalls of relying exclusively on government for consumer protection.

In a four- page "Dear Friend" letter printed on recycled paper, Nader asserted that if a strong citizen movement had started 25 years ago, the nation's poverty and hunger would have been "discovered" long ago, cities would not be "choking with cars," consumers would not be "cheated by" planned product obsolescence, and water "would still be safe for swimming." In closing, Nader invited citizens to think what American life "will be like 20 years from now if we don't take action."

Hughes Invited To Appear On 'Laugh-In'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) -- Mystery billionaire Howard Hughes has been invited to appear on a segment of the television's "Laugh-In" comedy series -- for $230 plus subsequent unemployment compensation.

The show's producer, Paul W. Keyes, wrote to Hughes in response to a televised interview program on which a voice introduced as Hughes said he plans to become less of a recluse.

Dogs May Be Used To Combat Air Sabotage

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Federal Aviation Administration is having dogs trained to sniff out hidden explosives in an effort to thwart hijackers and saboteurs.

If the program is successful, the FAA plans to use the animals at Washington's National and Dulles International airports.

FAA Administrator John N. Shaffer said, "Although the dogs involved in the test program are intended for use at the two FAA - operated airports only, the concept could be adopted by other airports as well, thus further increasing the odds against successful hijackings or acts of sabotage."

After a 20-week training course, the four German shepherds will be tested for 45 days at National Airport before a decision is made whether to permanently adopt the program.

In a preliminary test at Dulles a year ago, dogs were able to sniff out explosives on persons and in luggage or cargo.

Officials said the dogs should be especially useful in quick checking and clearing of airplanes grounded by a bomb threat or hoax.

Loophole Closing Savings Pegged At $166 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Taxable income would rise by $166 billion if all loopholes in present tax laws were eliminated, a congressional committee has been told.

Joseph A. Pechman and Benjamin A. Okner of the Brookings Institution, a private research organization, said Friday it is unnecessary to "go to the extreme" of adopting a value - added tax, essentially a federal sales tax, to raise sorely needed federal income.

General Revenue Tax

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's Budget Director and comptroller, John C. Vaughn, reports that the general revenue (tax) receipts of the state totaled $318,364,772 for the first six months of the 1971-72 fiscal year.

That compared with $251,084,704 for the first six months of the last fiscal year.

Missouri's best revenue producer, the sales-use tax, jumped from $147.5 million to $175.3 million in the comparative six month periods.

Income tax receipts rose from $71.9 million in the first six months of last fiscal year to $106.7 million for the comparable period this fiscal year. That reflects the income tax increase enacted by a special session of the legislature in December, 1969.

Vaughn said in the first six months of this year the state has collected 42 per cent of the anticipated revenue for the year. At the same point last fiscal year only 37 per cent of expected revenue had been collected. He said he wants to take a look at January's receipts before deciding whether to make in any change in his anticipated general revenue estimate of $750,700,000 for the full fiscal year.

? Consumer's Question Box ? By Margaret Dana

Q. In a recent column you said a polyurethane foam mattress was more fire resistant than latex foam. But I saw a TV special which said urethane foam creates a deadly smoke that can kill people even if they are not burned by the fire. If this is so please explain your statement about urethane being fire retardant.

A. The two things are different hazards. Urethane foam, which today is usually treated for fire, or flame resistance when used in bedding, does not catch fire as easily as untreated latex foam. But once on fire, urethane foam does indeed give off toxic smoke, as do many other plastic materials. Moreover, urethane foam, as I mentioned recently, has the capacity to burn without a flame touching it, under excessive heat, such as in an automatic dryer. This again is not related to its flame resistance.

Q. Recently our local electric power company had to turn off the power in our area for six hours. I avoided opening my freezer and refrigerator as much as possible, but wondered how long food would be safe under these conditions. Can you supply any facts?

A. The first and most important thing to do is what you did-- avoid opening your freezer and refrigerator. How long the food in the freezer will remain frozen depends on the amount of food in the freezer. A full freezer will stay cold many hours longer than one only a quarter full. A refrigerator will not remain cold as long.

If the food becomes warm, especially meat or poultry, discard it. If you can take it out while still cold, cook it immediately. This will give you a little more leeway in holding it, but not six hours in a warm room. Fresh vegetables in the refrigerator will of course keep that long. Cooked ones may turn, however.

The real test of safety is actually the temperature of the foods -- if still cold to the touch, they are probably safe. If warm, they are doubtful.

Q. You recently asked us to tell you what the word "washable" on a label means to us. To me it means it won't fade when washed, or shrink, or have threads break. Why not require manufacturers to also put on the label what the fabric is made of?

A. Let me ask you another question: Why do you wash anything -- clothes, bedding, etc? I suggest we all wash things to get them clean. Isn't that what "washable" should mean first of all -- that you can get a fabric clean by using the directions given for washing? But being "washable" does not always mean that on labels. This is why I suggest we need an official definition of it from the consumer's viewpoint. As to labeling to tell what a fabric is made of; such a law has been in effect for years. Every textile product is legally required to tell what fibers are in the fabric, and what percentage of each is present.

Q. Will you give us a list of different essential protein foods which we can include in a meal to give the same amount of protein in a serving?

A. Here is a list of such servings of different proteins which have different costs -- some much less than others for the same benefit:

½ cup cottage cheese, 3 ounces cheddar cheese, 2½ cups milk, 3 ounces cooked, lean meat, fish, poultry, or 3 medium eggs

Many vegetable proteins like dried beans, peas, cereals and breads also offer inexpensive proteins, but animal proteins, such as meat or cheese, supply important bodily needs.

Q.Will you please answer two questions which have been bugging me for a long time. Is it true that aluminum cookware affects the food value of foods cooked in it and actually poisons people eating them? And do Teflon linings of pans have a harmful effect on foods cooked in such pans?

A. I have checked the research done on these two questions by various independent groups in colleges and universities, as well as by the Federal government. The conclusion is that no harmful effect on foods is caused by either. A lot of material has been published accusing these materials of toxic effects, but this research has been proven both out of date and unscientific, and actually primarily used to promote competing products.

Q. I would like to know what are the actual differences in the various kinds of cheddar cheese in stores. Why does "sharp" cheese usually cost more than "mild" when it.s the same cheese?

A. The length of the "aging" period is what makes the difference in both flavor and cost. "Mild" cheese has been aged two to three months, and its flavor has developed only slightly. "Mellow-aged" cheddar has been cured four to seven months and has a much better developed flavor. "Sharp" cheese has been aged eight to 12 months, and so has the full, well- developed cheddar taste. The longer the cheese is held, the more it will cost. Since a "sharp" cheddar does not get onto the market as soon as "mild" cheese, it costs more.

NEW BEDDING for needy families in New Madrid County has been donated to the New Madrid area opportunity center of Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers employed at St. Jude Industrial Park near Marston.

Families Get New Bedding At New Madrid

NEW MADRID — Needy families in New Madrid county are receiving new bedding through the New Madrid area opportunity center of Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation donated by union members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers employed at St. Jude Industrial Park near here.

Center coordinator, Mrs. Bea Smith said new sheets, pillowcases, sheet blankets and bedspreads valued at $400 were being distributed.

During Christmas, Mrs. Smith said, the IBEW rented a truck to deliver from St. Louis a load of clothing, including over 100 pairs of new shoes, toys fruit and candy to the center of disadvantaged children, which was donated by civic organizations, churches and individuals.

Alaska is the only state in the Union bordering on two oceans — it is bounded on the north by the Arctic and the south by the Pacific.

New Director Plans Area Training Classes

KENNETT — Wilbur Thornton, Malden, newly appointed civil defense director of Dunklin County, said today he plans to set up civil defense training classes in each community and then unite the communities to establish an emergency operating plan for the county.

Thornton, appointed director by Dunklin County Presiding Judge Fred Neal, said "The concept of civil defense is relatively new and the disaster planning program for the county will be slow and take a lot of time. But over the next year, I hope everyone in the county will be informed on what action to take in case a disaster should occur.

"A disaster may result from enemy attack, sabotage or other hostile action, or from fire, flood, tornado, earthquake or other natural causes," he said.

The main purpose for disaster planning is to develop plans and programs within the county at all government levels to save lives, minimize damage, deal with immediate emergency conditions and restore facilities in the event of a disaster, natural or manmade.

"Most people in the county feel you run a bigger risk of being killed by a dinosaur that by a tornado," the director said. "I feel this philosophy has been brought on by the fact that in the country the past two years that we have never witnessed the disaster of a tornado or an earthquake or any major disaster. We have certainly been lucky. You don't wait until you have a fire to organize a fire department. You don't wait until you have a car wreck until you have car insurance. You plan ahead and prepare in case an accident should happen.

"Civil defense disaster planning works on the same idea— planning ahead and being prepared for disaster and being ready to help your friends and neighbors in an orderly manner should a disaster strike.

"Many people in Malden changed their philosophy toward tornadoes last spring when they got a front-row seat to a funnel stretched from a dark sky to the ground which finally dissolved into a cloud and spewed our city with rain and hail," he said.

"We were lucky and disaster plans which the local civil defense agency had worked on were tried out. Many things went wrong, but many things went right. The warning siren in Malden sounded, many people took cover and many people praised the efforst of the men in the Malden severe weather watch organization."

Since then Malden civil defense officials have worked on updating their weather watch and disaster plans and the last week of this month a team of men from the state disaster planning and operations office in Jefferson City will visit Malden to update the planning and operations even more.

"Many towns and communities have not been as lucky as Malden which receive; a second chance to plan and prepare for a disaster.

"I have always used Lubbock, Tex., as a prime example of planning ahead for disaster," Thornton said. In 1957, Lubbock received time to plan by not being hit by a tornado that dropped close to their city. City officials started working on emergency operatiing procedures they would follow to cope with a tornado disaster should one occur.

"Even though they planned and worked for 13 years, May 11, 1970, brought to Lubbock even a closer look at nature's most awesome killer. The tornado hit Lubbock with all its fury, did millions of dollars in damage, knocked out power lines, 30,000 phones and killed 26 people.

"Many more could have lost their lives, but because of the city officials' disaster planning, weather watch spotters reported that a funnel was headed for the area that was struck. City officials then, on a previously planned communications hook-up, broadcast to the people to take over.

"After the tornado had passed, city officials alerted the public of the devastated areas that would be sealed off, dispatched fire department, rescue teams,police and medical personnel, all working closely together in a well - organized manner. The city government worked like a well - oiled machine, instead of in chaos and panic," he said.

The plan had worked because city officials had planned to make it work and the officials knew what to do and how to do it.

"I do not tell the story of Lubbock as a scare story. But I think it is a look at reality and what can happen in our county or any community at any time.

"Just two weeks ago I viewed the damage left in the community of Scott City, a town just south of Cape Girardeau, and thought how fortunate they were in that only one person died as a result of the tornado," Thornton recalled.

"In figuring the wind drift of the cloud and wind that struck the city, that same area of the squall line passed over our county.

"There is never a guarantee that even though you plan for 20 years, that if a tornado or a major disaster strikes our county, that no one would be injured," he said. "Because no matter how many spotters you have, a funnel can drop out of a cloud in a second and disasters of all types can occur in moments.

"We can, however, work at informing the public on what major actions to take to prepare themselves to help save lives, minimize damage and cut the panic and chaos to a minimum.

"Let's suppose a tornado hits a community that has not planned for such a disaster. What do you see? Chaos, panic and no organization at all.

"On the other hand, a community with a plan will have an organized severe weather watch spotter program with volunteers already aware of the approaching squall line.

"The local civil defense director and the mayor will keep the public informed by radio. The people will have been informed as to the safest place to go in their homes.

"Rescue squads will be dispatched to the area. These men will have received training in first aid and proper removal of injured from houses and cars.

"I hope that over the next year we will be able to set up civil defense training classes in each community in the county and that each community, not just one or two, will help us in establishing an emergency operating plan.

"To make the plan work, it will take many volunteers who will take their time to enroll in the program. There are so many questions that will have to be answered which will take a lot of time. For instance, this question. What would school officials do if a funnel was headed toward a school full of children; Have they been informed as to what to do? How about our hospitals?

"In the course of this interview, I don't want to sound like the civil defense is going to run the county in times of emergency, but there are times when disaster and emergency occur when the professionals need help. I feel Dunklin County has been blessed with a group of the best state patrolmen in the state. I feel we have an outstanding sheriff's department. Our medical needs are the same as many in the nation — short, but we are thankful for the doctors we have.

"But in times of disaster, as I have mentioned before, the load can become too big for the professionals to handle and a helping hand from trained civilians can save lives.

"I hope in the next year we can put together an organized plan with all the CB'ers and ham operators in Dunklin County working together in an organized communications hookup.

Last month Malden held a business and industry civil defense conference. A meeting will be held in Kennett in the near future. The purpose of the meeting was to develop plans to cope with disaster, should it strike in their industry.

"To have an effective disaster plan for each community in Dunklin County, it would take a lot of effort on the part of a lot of individuals. Phil Shelton and Bill Wilburn of the Bootheel Economic and Development Council, have already put in a lot of work on this program. And I might add, out of the six counties in the commission, Stoddard County is the only county without a county director.

"I would like to say in closing, I for one, as a native of Dunklin County, would like to commend Judge Neal for caring enough about the citizens to establish an office of disaster planning.

"It shows to me he certainly cares what happens to the people in our county and wants each city of Dunklin County prepared and ready to meet the challenge should a disaster strike.

"Again I would like to say it would be a slow process in developing a plan in the county but in due time the disaster planning and operations office in Jefferson City will have to hand top honors for county disaster planning to Dunklin County."

Sky Marshals May Be Cut Despite Success

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid reports the sky- marshal program will be cut back in fiscal 1973, the Customs Bureau says the force is a powerful deterrent to hijackings, citing 539 arrests and the seizure of thousands of weapons in its first year of operation.

Customs Commissioner Myles J. Ambrose said Sunday that 20 arrests were made aboard aircraft during the year. He said that included seven arrests in response to hijackings in which the hijacker made himself known and 13 others involving serious threats to flight safety.

The other 519 arrests were made during predeparture flight checks, Ambrose said. Sky marshals responded to more than 50 bomb threats, and seized or detained 36,459 potentially dangerous weapons, he said.

The sky-marshal program was started in late 1970 on a temporary basis after President Nixon responded to a wave of hijackings.

DRIVE-IN WINDOW AT REAR OF STORE

Coffee Corner by Cherie

I cannot for the life of me understand why these silly boys want to let their hair grow so long. Here I am sitting in the beauty parlour and going through all sorts of ridiculous dos so I'll come out with this fuzzy mess of mine looking half way decent for two or three days, and my hair isn't near as long as what some of these fellas are wearing now. Gee, I always thought there were two great things going for being male (1) you could ask out who you wanted to for a date, and (2) you didn't have to worry about your hair other than washing it and getting an occassional haircut! And just think — some guys are lucky enough to be bald and then no problem whatsoever — I knew the younger generation didn't have much cool and this just goes to prove it! Heavens, for generations Nature (and Mother Nature is always smarter than we puny humans), has been evolving people so they have smaller little fingers and toes and less and less hair and these silly kids, next thing you know they'll want a bone graft so all their fingers and toes will even out! I don't know, but to me to be able to sail down the street in an open convertible and let the wind blow in your face and have no hair worries would just be fantastic and these kids have just gone and blown a really great happening. Anyway, my main objection is that I still like to know if the object of my attention is male or female and who knows nowadays! I mean it gets pretty embarrassing when you can go up to a young lady and discreetly ask her the way to the nearest "powder room" and have her give you directions for the "gentlemen's" in bass — now just think about that (and be very, very careful who you approach for directions).

Coach Calls The President

in the
Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON — In spite of all he has to do, President Nixon still takes time out of his busy day to telephone football coaches and offer them encouragement and advice.

While the President does this on the spur of the moment, it has never occurred to any football coach to telephone Mr. Nixon and offer him words of inspiration and solace.

"Hello, Mr. President, this is Coach Harold Elkins of the John V. Lindsay High School football team. I just wanted to call you and tell you to keep your chin up and don't get discouraged because you've lost a few lately."

"Thank you, Coach."

"The most important thing to remember is that when you're on the five- yard line and you're fumbling, the other guy still has to recover the ball."

"I never thought of that, Coach."

"Mr. President, my team has lost 39 out of its last 40 games, but I learned one thing. Never give up. You have to say to yourself, 'I may be losing the battle for inflation or the economy; or the fight with labor or with Congress,' or whatever you're losing at the moment, 'but I'm going to stick in there and give as good as I get, because I'm a pro.' "

"Those are inspiring words, Coach."

"Now, I want to tell you something, Mr. President, that you probably don't know about me. I always wanted to go into politics. But I wasn't light enough to make the team. I played some sandlot politics, and in my freshman year in college, I ran for a couple of offices, and so what I tell you now comes not from the heart, but from experience.

"I want to make one thing perfectly clear, Mr. President. You're going to goof between now and 1972— everyone goofs in politics, as in football, but the man who wins is the one who says, 'I've goofed, but I'm still in the ball game.' "

"Coach, I've got Chou Enlai on 'hold.' "

"No, I don't."

"It's team spirit. General Pershing once said that a team with a great morale is nothing if you don't have the spirit to go with it."
